Bewusstseinskontrolle

This book is about the obscure 'MK Ultra' mind-control program. The American Government officially recognizes that this was an active project from 1953 to 1973.

This text contains four major sections. This part outlines the history and technical specifics of MK Ultra from a layperson perspective. The image on the following page is a diagrammatical compass and summary of this book's plot.

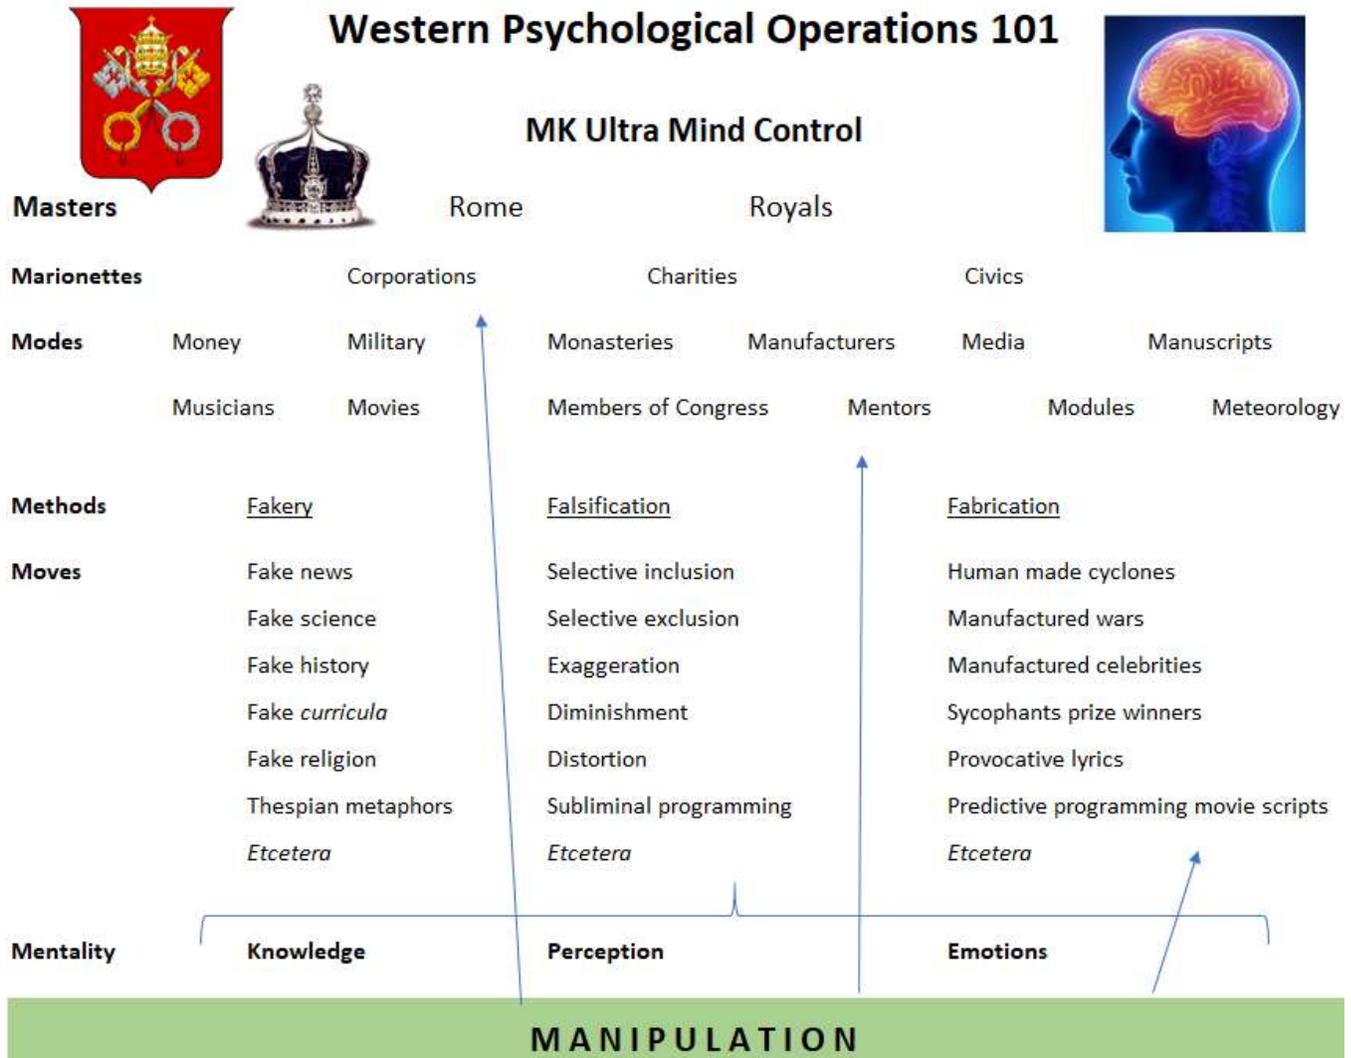

The second segment, the largest, centers around this volume's map . It explores these topics in order: Masters, Marionettes, Modes, Methods and Moves. Two additional contemporary crux topics feature: Morphine (i.e. Pharmaceuticals) and Microwave MK Ultra weapon tech.

This booklet concludes by discussing contemporary issues in the emerging revised global arrangement of military and economic power. It centers on the ways that classic MK Ultra mind-control techniques may be used to distract humanity from a civilizational reset of beyond epic magnitude.

The origins of MK Ultra are traceable to biological experiments conducted by Nazi German military scientists on civilians during the Second World War.

What does MK stand for?

- ◉ MK stands for “mind control,” using the German spelling “kontrolle.”
- ◉ The German spelling is most likely inspired by the Nazi Germany experimentation techniques.

Christensen, nd

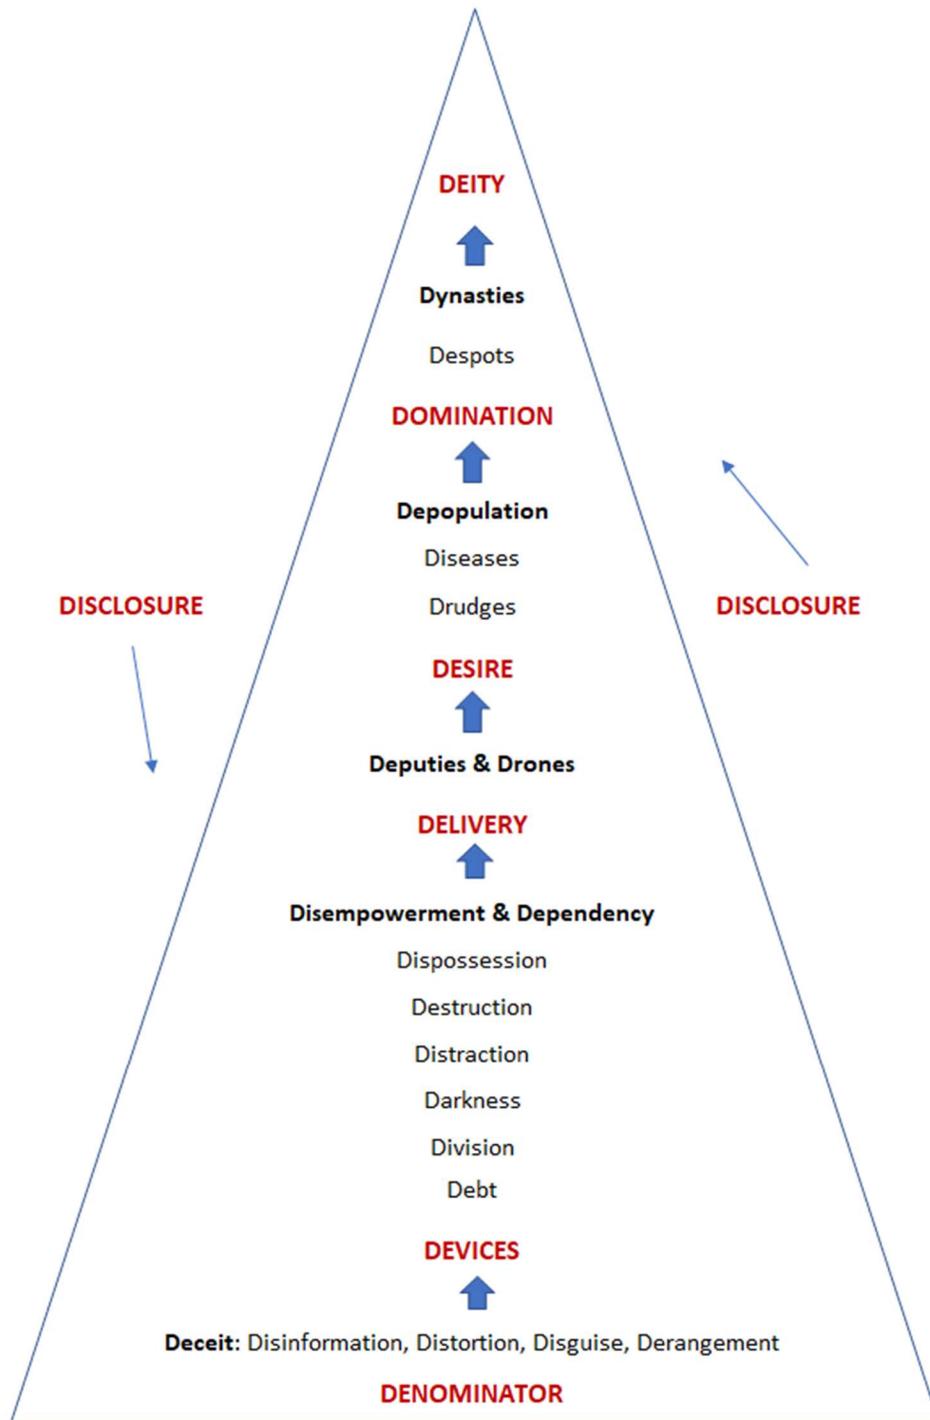

All vessels voyage to Venice. The Vatican Jesuit Black Pope oversaw the Western order of power under Admiralty (Maritime) Law – the Law of the Sea, prior to the Trump Rebellion of 2017 (Jericho, 2019b). Under this crumbling order, the inbred Saxe-Coburg & Gotha pedophilia crime family (House of Windsor) oversaw 53 Commonwealth slave nations. This cartel uses various modes to execute their Order out of Chaos, New World Order. Warmongering, blackmail, extortion, bribery and mass murder are staples. I explore an example of each mode in this book: Money, military, monasteries, manufacturers, media, manuscripts, musicians, movies, Members of Congress, mentors, modules and meteorology. These devices employ one or more overlapping methods: fakery, falsification and fabrication. Such interventions shape the mental experiences of humans' and groups' understanding of knowledge, perceptions and their emotions.

The grand objective of the Vatican-Coburg crime alliance is to manipulate people via their brain processes. This may trigger people to act or remain inactive – to this toxic cartel's advantage.

This book is a reordered discussion of this author's works on the notion of the Deep State Playbook 101 Theory. Please see overleaf. The goal of this text is to bring the MK Ultra issue to the forefront of all discussions in one volume that centers on cognitive brain processes.

The prime challenge for this book was to create a structured, ordered, simple diagram that fits to one page that makes sense of the complexity of the MK Ultra psychological operations (Psy-Op). This author has witnessed thousands of purposeful MK Ultra Psy-Ops in recent decades. To merely list these in an unstructured, detailed volume may overwhelm those new to this topic.

Those who manage MK Ultra projects at apex levels believe that they serve a dark deity, such as the Venetian Black Sun Occult. Dynasties such as the Vatican, Saxe-Coburg & Gotha crime family (House of Windsor) and the Rothschild banking crime family are top-tier Black Sun dynasties.

MK Ultra

MK Ultra was a secret, now declassified program that aimed to learn the effective ways of controlling minds of individuals and collectives such as military forces, communities and nations. The Director of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) approved MK Ultra in 1953. It developed in the context of the Cold War. America's Government acted to ensure that its psychological warfare program was at least on par with the Russian Military's equivalent (Smithsonian, 2017).

The use of natural drugs and synthetic drugs such as Lysergic Acid (LSD) was the most controversial aspect of the MK Ultra project. Some of these experiments were rogue (i.e. illegal). They were criminal as they did not gain the informed consent of all participants such as prisoners.

Psychological manipulation does not require the use of drugs to alter and control the psyche of individuals and populations. For example, activating street speakers that warn residents of the possibility of incoming nuclear weapons may be used as part of a psychological operation (Psy-Op) experimentation. Such acts may desire to monitor the level of fear among those affected.

The arsenal of Psy-Ops available to intelligence agencies is massive. There are literally many hundreds of weapons in this category. For the purposes of simplicity, this book classifies tools as targeting a person's body, brain or both. Attacking a person's body may have secondary effects that control the mind and vice versa. For example, the deployment of subtle irritating sound frequencies may damage a soldier's ear drums. This in turn lowers that soldier's morale.

The databases shown below are bureaucratic .gov locations. They provide official declassified documents about the MK Ultra mind-control project. They are shown for illustration purposes.

PROJECT MKULTRA, THE CIA'S PROGRAM OF RESEARCH IN BEHAVIORAL MODIFICATION

justice.gov/oip/blog/foia-update-supreme-court-decides-sims

The Sims case held unusual significance due to the CIA's decision years ago to declassify the particular information at issue in the case, pertaining to its controversial former MKULTRA drug research project. In a separate concurring opinion, Justices Thurgood Marshall and William J. Brennan, Jr., agreed that the D.C. Circuit had erred, but objected to the broad use of Exemption 3 in lieu of Exemption 1.

Readers should consider .gov sources as being the sole official custodians of data about the MK Ultra project. Readers should consult any government information with extreme skepticism, especially anything published by an intelligence agency. Some core information about the true scope of MK may never have been declassified. Other information, such as the examples above may be fakery, i.e., disinformation. Ironically, such false declassifications may be a part of the MK Ultra project. They may seek to mislead enemies who copy this program to their advantage.

Stanford University's Health Sciences Departments were leading contributors to MK Ultra projects. This especially includes collaborative teams such as those staffed by psychologists, psychiatrists and neurologists. This book's cover page is an example of a comprehensive open-access declassified source (an image) that chronicles specific aspects of the MK Ultra program. Readers may access this image direct at the CIA reading room in Washington DC. Stanford, Harvard and MIT were the leading universities that contributed to the MK Ultra project.

HARVARD-CIA

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. (AP) -- HARVARD UNIVERSITY SAYS IT CONDUCTED TWO HUMAN BEHAVIOR RESEARCH PROJECTS FOR THE CIA BUT DENIES PARTICIPATING IN CIA-SPONSORED TESTING OF LSD AND OTHER DRUGS ON HUMANS.

MONDAY'S ANNOUNCEMENT WAS HARVARD'S FIRST DISCLOSURE ON ITS INVOLVEMENT. IT GAVE NO DETAILS OF THE WORK DONE FOR THE CIA, BUT SAID A FULL STATEMENT ON THE PROJECTS IS BEING PREPARED.

THE HARVARD ANNOUNCEMENT OF INVOLVEMENT IN THE CIA'S MK-ULTRA HUMAN BEHAVIOR PROJECT FOLLOWS SIMILAR REPORTS BY THE MASSACHUSETTS INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY AND CALIFORNIA'S STANFORD UNIVERSITY, OUTLINING THEIR INVOLVEMENT IN CIA-FUNDED PROJECTS.

Investigators may place a higher degree of confidence in historical documents uploaded on these universities' repositories. The CIA publicly acknowledges the contribution of these elite universities. Stanford University maintains a dedicated small MK Ultra digital repository.

MEMORANDUM FOR: THE RECORD

SUBJECT : MKULTRA Subproject 85

1. The purpose of Subproject 85 is to support the research of Dr. [REDACTED] of the Stanford University School of Medicine [REDACTED] on human blood groups. Dr. [REDACTED] is one of the leading investigators on blood groups in man from both the immunological and genetic standpoints.

2. The scope of Dr. [REDACTED] study will include a literature survey on blood groupings from the forensic standpoint. He will also include in his survey the latest information available on the minor groupings. The attached proposal gives in detail the nature of the work to be done.

3. The total cost of the project for one year is estimated to be $1,000.00. To this sum must be added $40.00 representing a four percent service charge to the [REDACTED] making the total amount $1,040.00. The [REDACTED] will function as cutout and cover for this grant. The cover title of the project is [REDACTED] and is presumably being supported by a research grant from the Foundation. Charges should be made against Allotment 9-2502-10-001. The project commences 1 July 1958.

Madness

This section overviews basic examples of mind manipulation that are understood by laypersons outside of medical fields. These are generally known as 'altered states of consciousness'.

Subliminally programmed – suggestive triggering

The nine altered states of consciousness listed on the prior page are not mutually exclusive. A drugged person may become psychotic due to their hallucinations. Subliminal programming may trigger audiences to become stunned and remain in a short-term trance. A useful way to consider these nine altered states of consciousness, from a MK Ultra perspective, is shown in this two-dimension diagram below. Classifications are based on dominant tendencies. Some states of consciousness are unreal; others are real. Some by nature tend to be long term/permanent and others are temporary. Some states may fit into multiple continuums depending on the context.

Jericho (2020)

Subliminal programming is a standalone classification. Its fake world effects tend to last longest. This may explain high popularity of MK Ultra projects that target the masses with disinformation.

Subliminal programming involves purposefully embedding hidden messages in content that can change a person's or groups' perceptions, knowledge and actions, without the target being conscious of the manipulation. The human body absorbs experiences and information from their five senses: sight, hearing, touch, taste and smell. Subliminal messages can be communicated to a person via any of these senses. Some food sellers deliberately keep store temperatures lower than other retail outlets. At a subconscious level, people tend to associate feeling cold with being hungry or malnourished. At the group level, shoppers collectively are more likely to buy more food than they initially planned to buy when they shop in a chilly supermarket. This is an example of how subliminal mind-control planning is covert, deceitful and advantages the programmer.

Hollywood productions insert chemtrails into skies as though they are a natural phenomenon. They are not. Repeated inclusion of manmade phenomena, without explanation, desensitizes audiences who are exposed to images that normalize climate changing chemtrails loaded with barium, strontium, arsenic and aluminum that are sprayed by government-managed climate engineering aircraft.

The Operational Potential of Subliminal Perception

Richard Gafford

Perception is demonstrated to have occurred below the threshold of conscious sensory experience when a person responds to a stimulus too weak in intensity or too short in duration for him to be aware of it. Individual behavior without awareness of the stimulus, of which subliminal perception is a subtype, has been a subject of study in psychological laboratories for at least 70 years, and a great deal of technical data has been collected on the subject. Recently it has been associated with some theories of depth analysis and popularized for possible commercial exploitation by the advertising world.

In the most sensational of these popularized experiments, an increase in popcorn sales in a New Jersey movie theater is said to have been stimulated by subliminal interruptions of the feature film with an advertisement urging the patrons to buy popcorn. The exposure time used, a small fraction of a second, was too brief for conscious discrimination by an observer absorbed in the film story but presumably long enough to have some stimulating effect. The advertising men who are currently interested in this phenomenon as a sales technique argue that the short-duration stimulus appeals to a positive motive, for example an appetite for popcorn, without arousing the rational, conscious sales-resistance of the individual, based perhaps on the desire to save money or lose weight.

The argument becomes more complicated with respect to a product which there is no specific preexisting positive motive to acquire. The appeal is now said to be directed to a "deep" underlying motive presumed to be always operating, never satiated, say the sex drive. The masked stimulus arouses some aspect of this ubiquitous sex drive, a drive which can hardly be directly satiated in polite society and one of which the conscious recognition is more or less anxiety-producing. The vague discomfort the individual feels as a result of subconscious stimulation must be allayed by some associated gratification, and this gratification - the advertiser hopes - is the socially acceptable acquisition of the product which he is trying to

The popularity of MK Ultra and mass programming mind-control to micromanage populations is explained by two core factors – cost and efficacy. Tyrants, such as royal crime families, have three broad tools at their disposal to coerce populations: bribery, violence and mind-control.

Bribery by its nature is expensive. Those at the top tend to reserve bribery for the handful of people who manage high power. Corrupt CEOs and senior judges are examples of ranked leaders.

Violence is risky. The universal slavery endgames of brutal regimes become blatantly obvious. The masses are more likely to use force to rebel. Military deserters may fight alongside rebels.

Mass mind-control is appealing as it can be done covertly, universally and cheaply. In the opinion of this author, and many others who write about MK Ultra, most people are not aware of the various ways that the 0.0001% at the top silently and incrementally use mind-control techniques to create a slave hell gulag matrix that works to their advantage. Sadly, most MK Ultra aware victims don't resist by choice. They think that it is futile to fight a monster system. It is their destiny to become slaves with no rights. MK Ultra weapons hide in plain sight. Many people line up for days and pay premium prices for MK Ultra devices that are purposely designed to deplete and enslave their body, mind and higher being. Apple iPhones and their spy software algorithms that track your thoughts and location likely fall into this category.

Muppets

Those who aim to manipulate people and populations act to quell peoples' free actions. They also activate those who otherwise would not rise to an occasion. They mostly deploy words, gestures, sounds and images. These actions may be blatant (overt) or subtle/subliminal (covert).

Manufactured plastic pop singers who lip synch negative connotation adjectives such as 'nigger', 'faggot' and 'skank' are as original cyanide. Transmitting these tunes via radio-waves can instantly arouse alternative sensations among different people. For example, it can excite, shock or humiliate. To be fair, the creative use of such words, in a sincere context, can have positive outcomes such as healing.

Controlled opposition skill techniques are older than the official age of Queen Elizabeth II's (deceased) MK Ultra body double (93). Fake champions of We the People are given billions of dollars in free advertising by Hollywood powerhouse producers and distributors. The Oscars award these thespians a rigged Gong to legitimize their bogus brand. Controlled opposition skills communicate this covert message to the masses – 'You do not need to get off your sofa and fight political corruption, because champions like us are (pretending) to do this work for you, on a mass scale and we are succeeding'. Sly Fox news is owned by globalist gangster Rupert Murdoch. Sly + Fox = Controlled + Opposition; i.e. to their fake opponents such as

CNN. As adorable, and sensical as anchors like Jeanine may be, it is difficult to overlook the identity of their big bad boss who signs their paychecks. TV stars with creative control is a fantasy.

America had one actor in 2018 who was in this category. ABC (Disney) panicked and sacked her.

Medicine

Biomedical subfields are the most obvious disciplines that can aid the development of weapons that can attack a person's body and mind. The sad image on this book's cover of ten years old Ellen Atkins depicts experiments that respond to memory erasure. Those who care to confirm the authenticity of this story may access this article. As readers, we can only assume that a mainstream news source such as Zero Hedge (2018) have exercised due diligence when researching this story. I hope that this article is not just another example of corporate fake news.

zerohedge.com/news/2018-05-22/their-lives-were-ruined-victims-cia-mk-ultra-brainwashing-plan-class-action-suit

Selective or universal mind erasure capability is a valuable military tool. Discharged officers who worked on top-secret projects can have this memory erased via drugs, brain surgery or hypnosis. The ace Borne Identity film series featuring Matt Damon seems to fit into this thematic category.

Marketing

For many, marketing is the commercial branch of psychology. Virtually all marketing practices are applications of manipulative psychology. If I place a sign in my shop window that states only the following words “Apples, 99 cents a pound” I am probably not engaging in mind manipulation. Consider an advert that states “red apples, 99 cents a pound – the most delicious ones available in London at this store – offer applies today only!!”. This text uses subjective adjectives (e.g. most delicious), persuasion (today only) and urgency (!!). This text involves marketing techniques that goes beyond merely listing objective facts. Propaganda is one of the most powerful and popular tools of MK Ultra projects. These images below aim to arouse fear in the viewers’ minds.

Images that show human suffering and worst-case scenarios outcomes tend to create more anxiety in viewers’ minds than text alternatives painted on a wall. For example, the government could paint on city walls: “enlist in the Army today – Our nation faces grave danger”.

Please freely reflect on the paragraph above.

To what extent, if any, do you agree with this author’s opinion?

Media

Fake news is the norm in Western countries. In America, six holding companies control around 95% of mainstream news media. Several of the largest stockholders of these media own listed shares in two or more of these six entities, such as Disney, Fox and AT&T. Extremely biased, politically partisan rags such as The New York Times routinely dress up opinion pieces and gossip columns as so-called news. A rare public correction by The Times in 2019 occurred only because of a non-threatening, legitimate public intervention by America's incumbent President.

Times Makes Major Correction That Undermines Its Big Brett Kavanaugh Story

Fake news is a staple of military strategists. This tactic rarely deceives intelligence officers on the opposing side. They are trained to evaluate information from several perspectives. They do so with arch skepticism. Russia Times news is an example of a media outlet that covertly serves as the disinformation branch of the Russian Government. It lawfully operates in Western countries such as America under the generic name RT News. This blatantly biased news agency routinely televises news stories that undermine Western governments such as Britain and America.

Mockingbird

The intense concentration of mainstream media cross-ownership enables a narrow number of commercial interests to coordinate globalist corporate agendas. Media commentators note how America's news channels report stories using near-identical language and slants. Such presentations typically simplify and polarize political issues as being a so-called 'left versus right' battle. This image below is a mockingbird media illustration (Crowley, 2018).

According to official American Government narratives, MK Ultra was gradually scaled down during the 1960s. It supposedly finally ceased to exist in 1973. This was the year that the CIA destroyed most files related to this program. Various CIA archives, such as this example below, refer to the final acts of MK Ultra occurring in 1973.

In the meantime, the committee headed by Senator Frank Church was looking into the CIA, and it called in Sid Gottlieb, who was then spending his retirement working as a volunteer in a hospital in India. Gottlieb secretly testified about CIA assassination programs. (In describing his role in its final report, the Church Committee used a false name, "Victor Scheider.") Asked about the behavioral-control programs, Gottlieb apparently could not—or would not—remember most of the details. The committee had almost no documents to work with, since the main records had been destroyed in 1973 and the financial files had not yet been found.

The issue lay dormant until 1977, when, about June 1, CIA officials notified my lawyers that they had found the 7 boxes of MKULTRA financial records and that they would send me the Moles who claim that MK Ultra never died in 1973 are the premise that inspires the authorship of this brief introductory booklet. Pages 20 and 21 list two illustration examples of mouthy moles.

Moles

This book by Marks & Lane (1979) claims to offer a deep exposé about MK Ultra using CIA provided sources. Two open-access links for this commercially published text are available in the references section of this document. This book published by Penguin is 262-pages in length.

AUTHOR'S NOTE

This book has grown out of the 16,000 pages of documents that the CIA released to me under the Freedom of Information Act. Without these documents, the best investigative reporting in the world could not have produced a book, and the secrets of CIA mind-control work would have remained buried forever, as the men who knew them had always intended. From the documentary base, I was able to expand my knowledge through interviews and readings in the behavioral sciences. Nevertheless, the final result is not the whole story of the CIA's attack on the mind. Only a few insiders could have written that, and they choose to remain silent. I have done the best I can to make the book as accurate as possible, but I have been hampered by the refusal of most of the principal characters to be interviewed and by the CIA's destruction in 1973 of many of the key documents.

The CIA archived this volume and provided the research data content. Armed with this knowledge, what degree of confidence do you have in the information put forward in this free book?

Roseanne Barr has done more to expose the countless MK Ultra mind-control atrocities than the rest of her Hollywood buddies combined. Readers may seek out numerous examples via their own online searches. These videos below are examples of many (RT 2013; IW Chan 27, 2019).

Roseanne Barr On MK ULTRA Mind Control In Hollywood

Roseanne Barr; 6:08: (Hollywood) is a big culture of mind-control too. MK Ultra mind-control rules in Hollywood. If you don't know that Google it, and look into it (RT, 2013).

Abbey Martin; (6:15): We've talked about operation Mockingbird, MK Ultra mind-control stuff and this goes back decades and decades. But Roseanne, do you know people who have been blacklisted? Is it just kind of a self-censorship in Hollywood, or do people actually get edged out if they are too much against the grain?

Barr; 6:36: Yeh, it's self-censorship after a while, but it's not just a crazy self-censorship. It's self-censorship, because there is actually a danger that you will never work again.

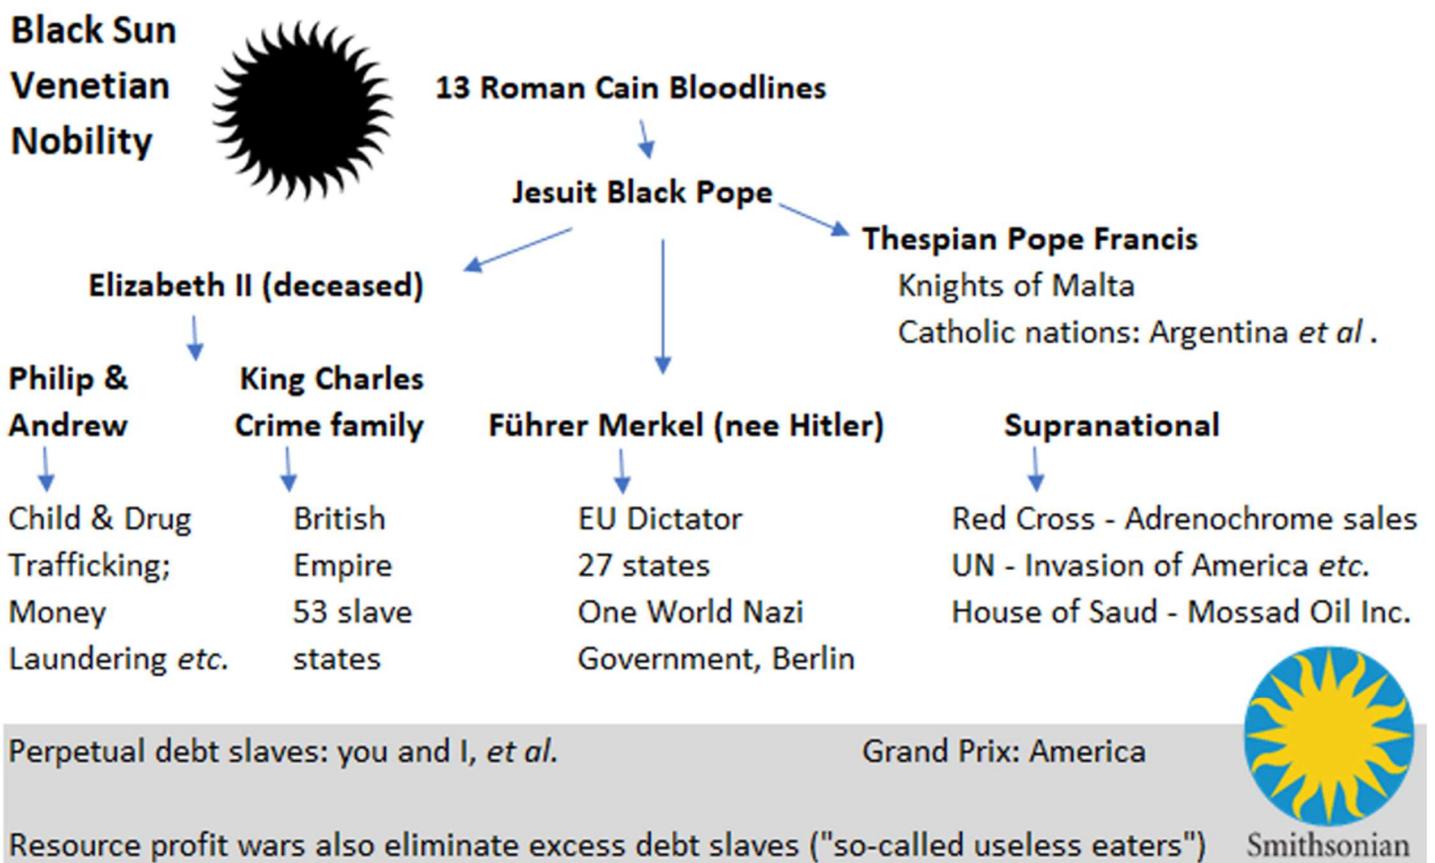

Have mainstream fake news media outlets such as Fox, CNN and ABC invited Roseanne Barr or others to express their views about MK Ultra on any of their shows?

Why is Roseanne talking about this topic on RT?

Given that RT is the host, does this alter your perception of Roseanne's testimony?

Masters

This author's free catalog of open-access books aims to simplify the complexity of the hierarchy of covert powers that control the West behind-the-curtain, a couple of levels higher than puppet parliaments. This diagram dated January 2020 is among the most simplified in this category.

Author: J. Jericho

I invite readers to consult the free book titled "Declare Independence – America" (Jericho, 2019b). This text may aid you to understand the detail that underpins this summary diagram.

This Western-centric global order of power is currently in a state of rapid flux. The America-first, MAGA Trump rebellion has expelled and neutralized foreign powers that have long subverted America's Constitution from within. Most of these agents serve/d the Saxe-Coburg & Gotha crime family (House of Windsor) and/or its higher-ranking Jesuit Black Pope Vatican overlord.

This diagram aims to summarize the complexity of this covert battle as at February 2020.

1, 2 & 3 denotes rank; Direct descendants of Cain rank highest.

In the Western context, most active MK Ultra mind-control regimes that target civilians aim to serve one or more entities listed above under the "European Black Sun Venetian Nobility" cartel umbrella. All major military powers use MK Ultra like projects on enemy military targets.

Marionettes

The claim that the largest, wealthiest and most far-reaching institutions monopolize popular public narratives is not a widely contested statement. For example, Britain's Government controls a multibillion pounds annual budget and trillions of dollars in wealth. It can garner the support of millions of Brits by merely placing a call for support in a national news advertisement.

It is debatable whether any individual exercises true influence over the masses. Everyone is replaceable. And mortal. Those who try to 'change the world' solo seem to die off – literally.

Governments, multinational corporations (worth circa USD 100 billion plus) and major religions are the arch executors of high power. In the West, this unholy Trinity, crudely speaking is: London as the home of Banking and Washington DC as the home of the Military. Rome is the home of Religion (MK Ultra). This argument relates to this book's prior chapter more than this one.

Three bodies: governments, corporations (e.g. Universal Studios, Hollywood) and religion are the dominant frontline service providers of MK Ultra mind-control acts that target civilians. A major goal of the Pentagon led Trump Rebellion is to quash toxic MK Ultra projects that attack citizens.

Most researchers who write/speak about the Deep State reality concur that globalist institutions overlap. For example, some royals sit on the boards of global corporations such as oil companies.

Microcosms

Powerful internal microcosms may implement their own MK Ultra programs. It is statistically more common, compared to global society, for Amish families and others from borderline mainstream religions to shun most/all mainstream radio, movies, television and news media. Those who do so with purpose tend to believe that these filters enhance their general wellbeing.

The Jehovah's Witness Church states that blanket bans on culture are not Church policy.

No. Our organization doesn't review specific movies, books, or songs so as to rule on what our members should avoid. Why not?

As shown above, decisions to filter entertainment are a household matter. Some scholars claim that certain fringe religions execute their own form of MK Ultra mind-control within their own community. Such religions may be labeled as 'sects' and 'cults' by the mainstream.

Speakers or writers who refer to a religion as a 'cult' or 'sect' may aim to diminish the legitimacy of that faith via language. They may also be implying or openly stating that this religion is a fraudulent Psy-Op such as MK Ultra.

Modes

Money

Financial bribery, financial extortion and debt-driven consumerism are classic MK Ultra mind-control playbooks. The English language idiom “hit them where it hurts the most – the wallet” is profoundly true. For many millions, cash is Queen. Concealment is a classic mind-control tool – holding back essential knowledge. America’s citizens are not permitted to know who owns the usurious, unconstitutional Federal Reserve that has plundered America’s taxpayers since 1913.

New York Org (2017)

The misleading name of The Federal Reserve is a classic psychological operation. It is a private bank that is mostly owned by European crime families such as the Saxe-Coburg & Gotha mob and the Rothschilds. The Federal Reserve is not a Federal American body. It does not hold reserves.

In this author’s opinion, this social media crazed world is saturated with information. Most people can only absorb small chunks of information. The meme above is an example of a minor chunk.

Do some, most or all memes aim to propagate some form of mind-control?

Please consider a range of answers beyond the three suggestions shown in this question.

Military

Is the bootcamp initiation indoctrination the ultimate form of MK Ultra mind-control, Sir?

Military (2016)

Hazing may be an ancient form of mind-control. It reminds the last admitted cohort that they are at the bottom of the slag heap. It's nothing personal. They can haze the next wave of recruits.

Royal military uniforms aim to remind rank-and-file foot soldiers that they are nothing special.

Please reflect on the Ellen Actins child case study (see page 15).

Is bootcamp procedure another case of mind erasure (brain reset)? Full or partial?

Monasteries

Religion is arguably the biggest Psy-Op on our planet. This is not to say that all religious texts are fake. Sinister elites may censor or alter a genuine theological text to their own arch advantage.

Sword and stone, oops, I mean words and tones are powerful weapons. Am I right, gorgeous?

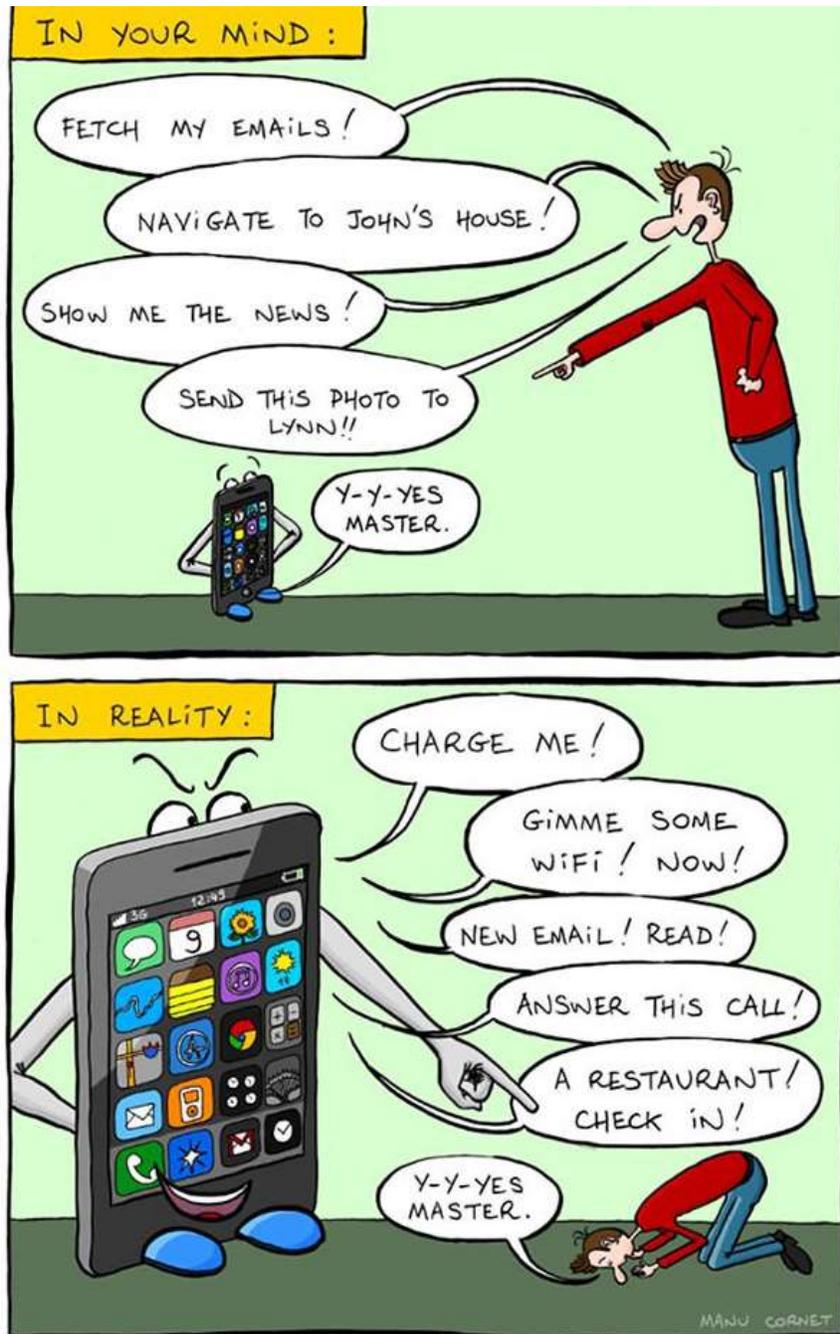

Calling a theologian or religious minister a 'heretic' may be the highest insult within some religious scholarly communities. Of course, some may wear this label as a badge of honor. ☺

Does the words 'heresy' and 'heretic' serve to silence dissenters within a belief system?

Manufacturers

The mass production of certain goods serves a covert purpose that aims to brainwash the masses. Those who control society manipulate the agenda of mass manufacturers. The number of examples is nearly equal to the number of goods sold in mainstream stores such as Walmart.

May you freely reflect on the design and marketing of mass popularity goods.

Media

Fake news is a fact of life. The only people who fearlessly call out this fact are the world leaders who don't serve Rome, Rothschilds or the Saxe-Coburg & Gotha crime family (House of Windsor).

So-called fact-check sites like Snopes (fake news) and factcheck.com (fake news) are owned, managed and funded by the same oligopoly that controls Western fake news empires such as Rupert Murdoch's toxic News Corp empire. Staff names published on these websites are shells.

'Fake News': Why Snopes Prefers Not to Say It Anymore

The phrase "fake news" was in and out of Snopes' style guide before it was common parlance. Until now, we never told our readers why.

BOND HUBERMAN

Fake news sites like Snopes aim to control false narratives by tapping into two human weaknesses – laziness and ignorance. Some people always believe any website that has a polished image. Fake news friends like Google gives Snopes top 3 search responses for controversial topics.

Manuscripts

Do you automatically believe that most or every fact circulated by famous history book publishers and encyclopedias is automatically true? If the answer is yes, why is this so?

Did Winston Churchill coin this phrase? This author does not know.

Famous popular phrases are often coined by the leaders who win historical battles.

The victors of war often burn books and destroy historical relics that challenge the narrative that they aim to promote in their reborn society. This agenda may push information that is fake, partially true or entirely accurate. Book burning is not automatically a devious process. It may be a strong sign that a new power does not plan to permit freedom of thought and free speech.

Elite museums that market themselves as 'Museums' are a form of MK Ultra. Their coded message states that only the lives of noble aristocratic families are interesting and matter. About 90% of all items in the massive collection at the New York Met Museum at Central Park showcase the lives of aristocratic families from a range of civilizations and regions. This collection bears close to zero resemblance to the quality and nature of the lives of the masses in prior centuries and millennia.

This mode is a unique case of falsified history.

Musicians

The most famous mainstream popular (pop) singers may influence the masses in multiple ways. They may do so via their lyrics (which are usually written by professional ghost songwriters, not the pop singer), costumes, dance moves, hand gestures, public speeches and product endorsements.

A common theory among independent MK Ultra researchers is that the most successful commercial acts are manufactured commodities. Powerful entities behind-the-curtain such as Freemasons and royals invest millions of dollars in promoting those celebrities who sign over their entire identity and future labor to these arch sponsors. They are controlled slave celebrities.

Most of these plastic celebrities end up promoting products, values and lifestyles that are toxic to society. This is because their arch handlers believe that 'Order from Chaos' expands their powerbase. In other words, so long as people continue to self-destruct at the bottom of the pyramid, the 0.0001% at the top can consolidate their trillionaire slave-ownership lifestyles.

Movies

Hollywood movies are among the most powerful mind-control weapons available to the trillionaire crime clans who control Universal Studios, MGM, Columbia Pictures and others. These illustration examples below outline a few ways that movies may mind-control the masses.

Be fearful: Global warming is real. Do what the government says, otherwise America will freeze.

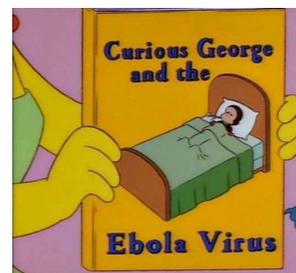

Predictive programming. Don't be surprised when the Twin Towers burn in the future.

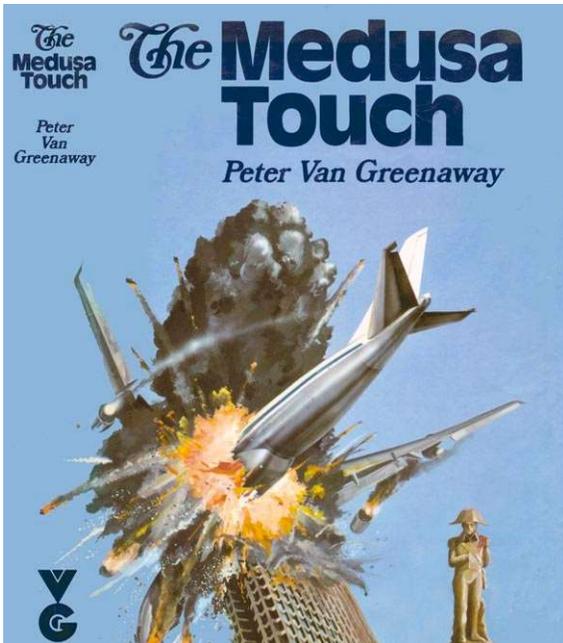

The Simpsons, images dated 1997.

Subliminal programming.

Ebola 2014

Hollywood movie-making technology blatantly proves to us that studio producers can create a movie illusion that looks close to 100% real to the naked eye. This technique is known as Computer Generated Imagery (CGI). Certain high-stakes events, that justify war, were partially or totally fabricated via Computer Generated Imagery. MK Ultra CGI deceives our eyes.

Deep Fakes

Nowadays, computer programmers can recreate moving and speaking images of celebrities such as politicians, actors and royals. These circus tricks may keep famous brand names like George Soros alive in public domains by their puppet managers, years after that celebrity died of natural causes, was imprisoned at GITMO, executed or voluntarily disappeared. This video below shows how the prestigious University of Washington recreates a fake speaking Barack Hussein Obama.

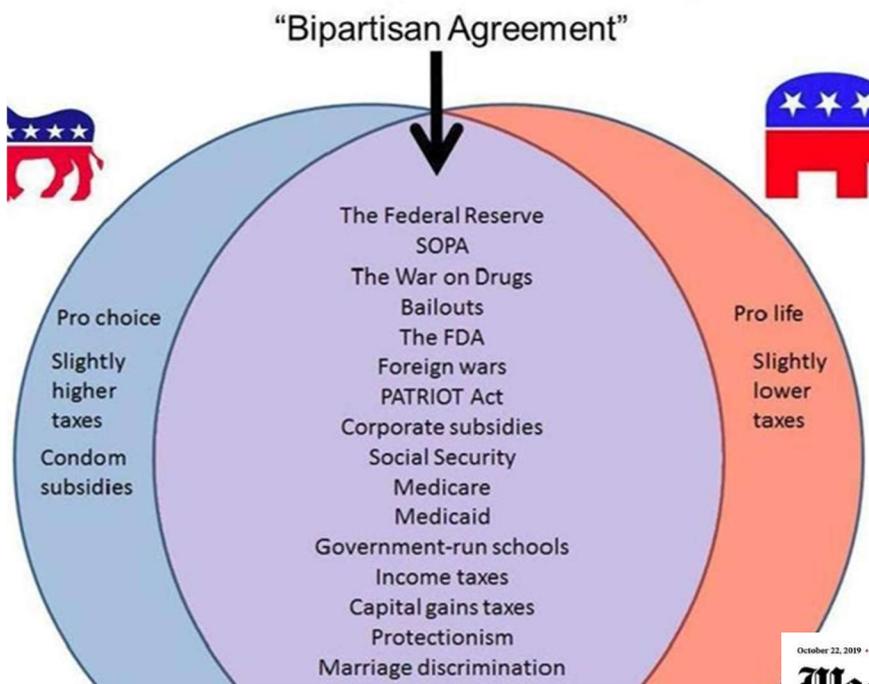

Most fake news stories that use dead billionaire brands attach a stale, Getty Images stock photo to the story. Two minutes of research is usually enough to find stories of that celebrity in the same clothes and pose, dated years prior to a 'breaking news' fake story. Computer generated video imagery, Getty stock photos and a body doubles keeps photoshop eyes dead Soros 'alive'.

Fake news CNBC embed a small sneaky footnote to advise that this story about Soros in January 2020 uses a Getty stock photo. So-called LIVE footage of this event was pre-recorded CGI fakery.

Members

Virtually all acts of politicians that you see on TV and other media are Live Action Role Play (LARP). These games aim to distract you and I from cold, brutal facts about parliaments. Politicians have absolutely no power whatsoever. Period. They are beholden to higher entities such as global corporations. An example is Royal Dutch Shell Oil that is owned by the Dutch Royal crime family.

Major political parties support the same core policies such as the Trans Pacific Partnership and the World Trade Organization. It does not matter whether Red or Blue win the election. The same key policies that enrich European trillionaire banking crime families and European royal crime families remain in place.

Are so-called bug eyes a classic sign of MK Ultra mind programming?

MK Ultra Second Amendment false flag scapegoats? Probably.

Miami Herald (2018)

USA Today (2013)

Broward County, Florida is worthy of a research project. Real eyes or Adobe photoshop?

On February 5, 2020, a woman resembling America's House Speaker Nancy Pelosi tore up a copy of the State of the Union address after Donald Trump completed his delivery. She tore a printed copy of this speech up three times before the camera. This self-destructive act is almost certainly political theatre: Live Action Role Play (LARP).

The reasons for this bizarre unprecedented event are probably not what they seem on the surface. And they are most likely not spontaneous.

As political outsiders, often the best we can do is speculate about the multiple motives. For example, was this self-denigrating, net vote losing act part of a covert plea deal?

Projection is a classic mind-control tool. Guilty parties publicly accuse critics of their crimes. The reason for this technique is the notion of the first-strike. If the accused party responds by saying: “Not true – you are talking about your crimes”, most people who are following this circus will likely assume that the accused is lying to escape their predicament. Accusations are powerful. As the famed saying goes – Mud sticks. Once mud has been flung onto an innocent person, it can be difficult to remove this guilt in the minds of millions who never read a print news story beyond the headline and the first few sentences. Mainstream news routinely prints misleading headlines.

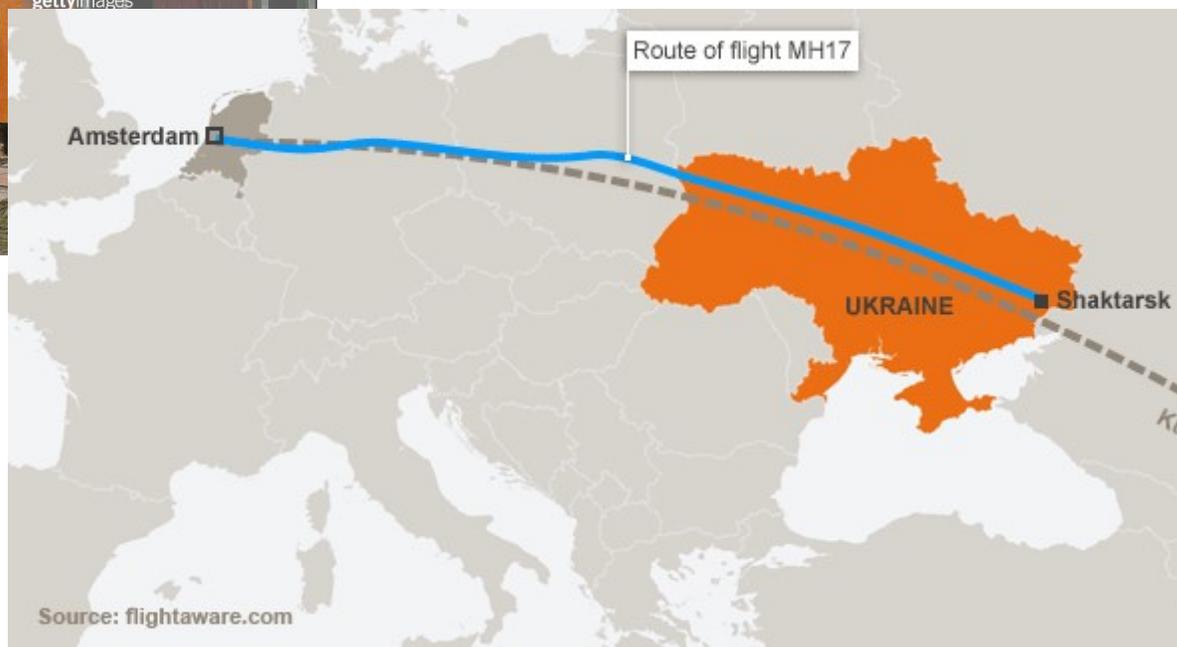

House: Orange Man colluded with Russia! Fake news.

House: Orange Man corrupt in dealings with Ukraine. Fake news.

Perhaps these phony accusations are being projected from the inbred royal families' International Court of Injustice at Den Haag.

House of Orange Man bad.

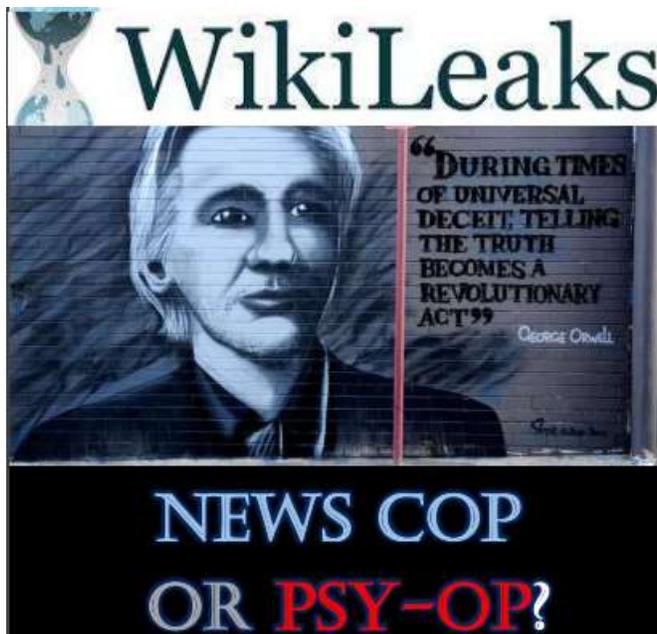

Mentors

Mentors come from all walks of life. Those persons who receive saturated media coverage are receiving billions of dollars in advertising for their personal brand. Deep State dirtballs like the Rothschild owned Slime Magazine and Forges don't give billions of dollars in free advertising to rebels who challenge the fundamental status quo of endemic global corruption.

According to fake news, Julian Assange attended 37 schools (e.g. Telegraph, 2010). What is the coded message of this claim? Is it this – don't waste your time researching Julian's past, because none of his school mates remember him? He only stayed at each school a couple of months at the most. Was a famous major prophet's name inserted into this fabricated Ass name as a Psy-Op, to enrage the masses? Inversion of Christianity is classic MK Ultra.

Modules

Brainwashing a nation works best when you start with children at preschool and follow this through all levels: junior school, high school, all the way to postdoctoral research. And, so it is. Academia is more corrupt than a 17 dollars US Treasury Note. Pre-college public education teachers have no control over school curricula. It is set at the state level in most countries. For example, the Ontario Government in Canada and the Texan Government in America authors core curricula. If a school board demands that 90% of the evolution curricula be devoted to Darwinism and 10% to creationism, or vice versa, all teachers in this jurisdiction must comply.

see www.ielts.agency

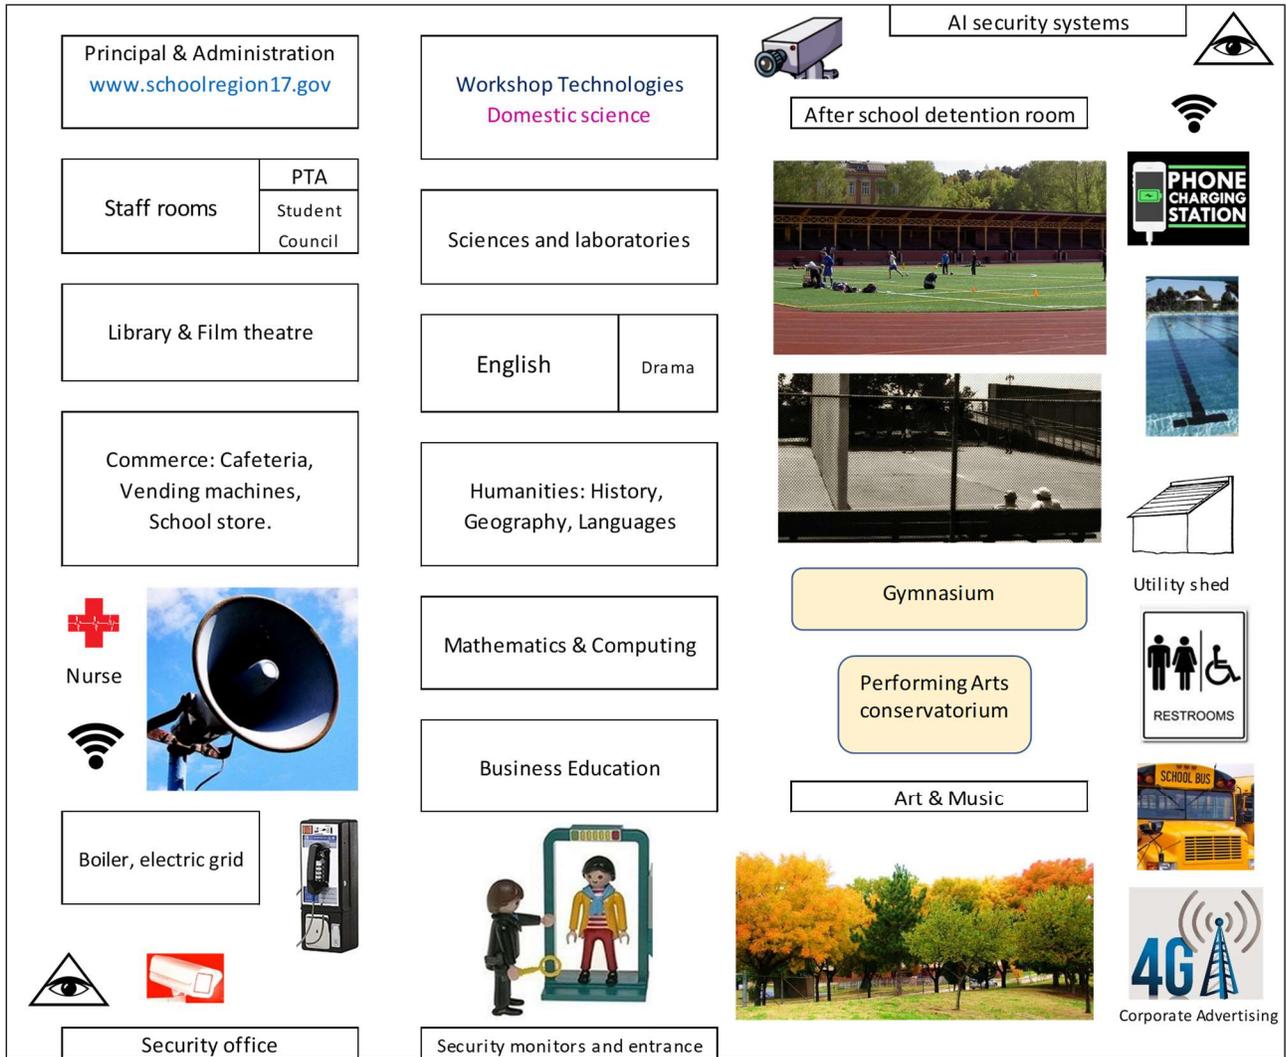

Mind-control propaganda is the norm among most of the highest-ranked, fake corporate research, cash-glutton colleges, such as the University of Sydney. As shown in the image left, this fading diploma mill is the public face of the IELTS human trafficking crime syndicate. The phony IELTS test has scammed billions of dollars from international students from India and China who study in Australia and Canada.

The public education system is designed to groom students into becoming obedient slaves who conform to the rules of society without questioning authority. A system of carrots (prizes) and sticks (e.g. detention) is imposed. The diagram overleaf shows how the functions and structures of a typical public high school in the West is a mirror image of Western society at-large. This may explain the growing popularity of home-schooling that aims to shield children from propaganda.

Meteorology

Can you remember the days when nature and Earthly cycles controlled the weather? I can, but only just. Climate geo-engineering is an example of a global MK Ultra project that has two distinct steps. Fake news like Rupert Murdoch's news.com.au push phony Climate Change science. The mass ongoing replication of this message by fake news giants deceives millions into believing that human-made Climate Change is real. Fake news site news.com.au maintain a Climate Change archive page. Using a brainwashed child climate change actor-activist is blatantly manipulative.

Australia's catastrophic bushfire season has sparked intense debate over whether it's linked to climate change. Here is the science.

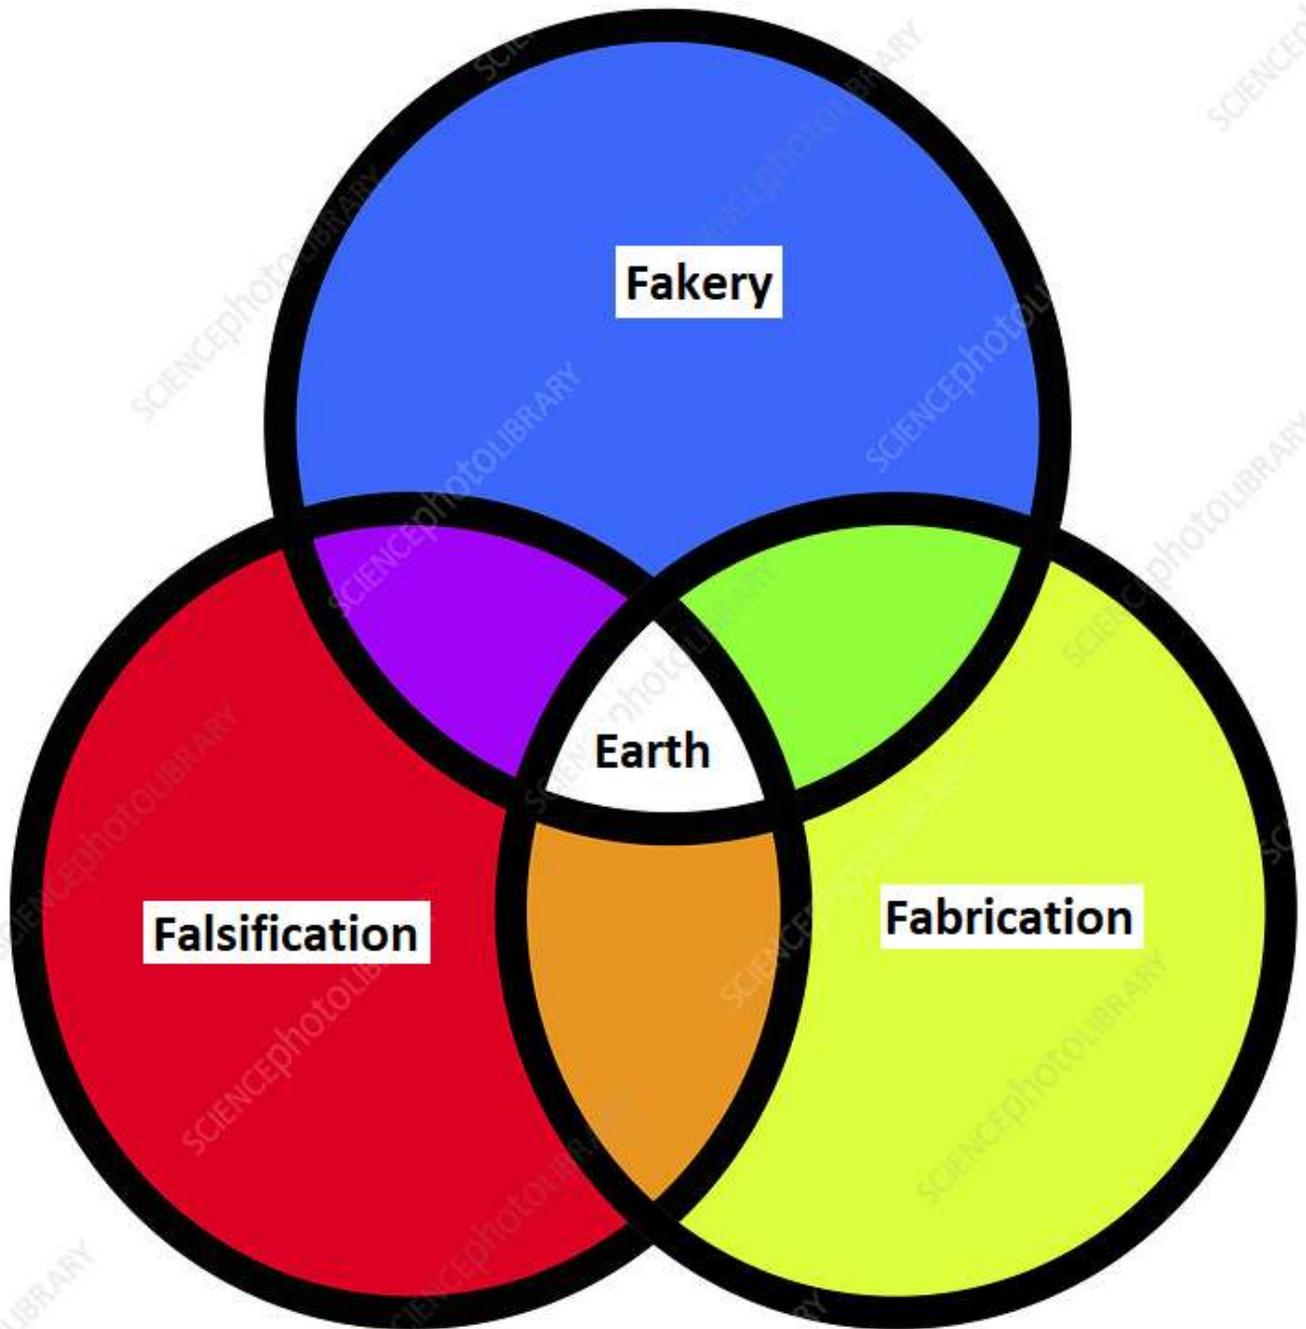

Deferring to 'science' is classic MK Ultra mind-control. Such statements are used to automatically win an argument. Whether science is true, or fake is not the issue. Much fabricated science is funded and disseminated by corrupt, wealthy entities, such as the Australian Government.

What is your view of the proper noun 'Political Science'? Is the truth hiding in plain sight?

Methods

Four words added to this diagram by this author.

In the MK Ultra context, fakery, falsification and fabrications of phenomena manipulate the human senses. They may be executed individually or collectively within the same action or project.

Fakery: Most unemployment data is phony baloney. It empowers incumbent governments. Many unemployed are not counted, such as those who work one hour a week. Fakery means making stuff up. A bit like travelers who invent their new sexy job title when abroad to impress others.

Falsification is a unique form of fakery. It involves distorting truths. Quoting people out-of-context is a classic case. Today, I told a political opponent that “I do not believe that unemployed people are lazy, useless eaters who don’t deserve food stamps”. Joe Bodydoublen told a sleepy CNN fake news reporter that I said “unemployed people are lazy, useless eaters who don’t deserve food stamps”. This is technically true. It is a falsification. His quote is out-of-context.

Fabrication may involve creating something that is real, for devious purposes. Some epidemic viruses are fabricated false flags. False flags usually pursue one or more covert, sinister purposes. Examples may include crashing a financial system and depopulating a heavily populated urban area. It also includes buying millions of fake vaccines from pharma companies who support the government implementing the false flag.

These strategies overlap. A fake virus may be fabricated, and the government’s phony fake news buddies exaggerate the death tally by 300%. Fake news stories may selectively quote updates provided by medical personnel out-of-context. These actions comprise one MK Ultra project.

Are you bored of these fake news, end-of-the world epidemic stories, that always seems to start in Asia? This opening sentence is a leading question. A popular technique among MK Ultra mind-controllers. Bird flu, Mad Cow, Swine Flu, Corona Virus and others. No disrespects to those who died. Are these viruses manufactured and deployed by militaries and big pharma the harmer?

In 2005, the Australian Government stockpiled at least 4 million doses of the Tamiflu anti-flu drug as a panic response to the so-called Bird Flu 'epidemic'. As far as this author can gauge, zero to few doses were administered. This stockpile is not an asset. They expire, just like cow's milk.

smh.com.au/national/unease-over-bird-flu-pecking-order-20050929-gdm5is.html

Unease over bird flu pecking order

The Federal Government should roll back the "culture of secrecy" surrounding how life-saving drugs will be rationed in the event of a bird flu pandemic, Labor says.

The Federal Opposition's health spokeswoman, Julia Gillard, asked the Government to explain who would get access to the 4 million doses of the anti-flu drug Tamiflu it has stockpiled in response to a potentially deadly flu epidemic.

September 29, 2005 – 10.00am

She also called for immediate funding to enable hospitals to prepare for a pandemic.

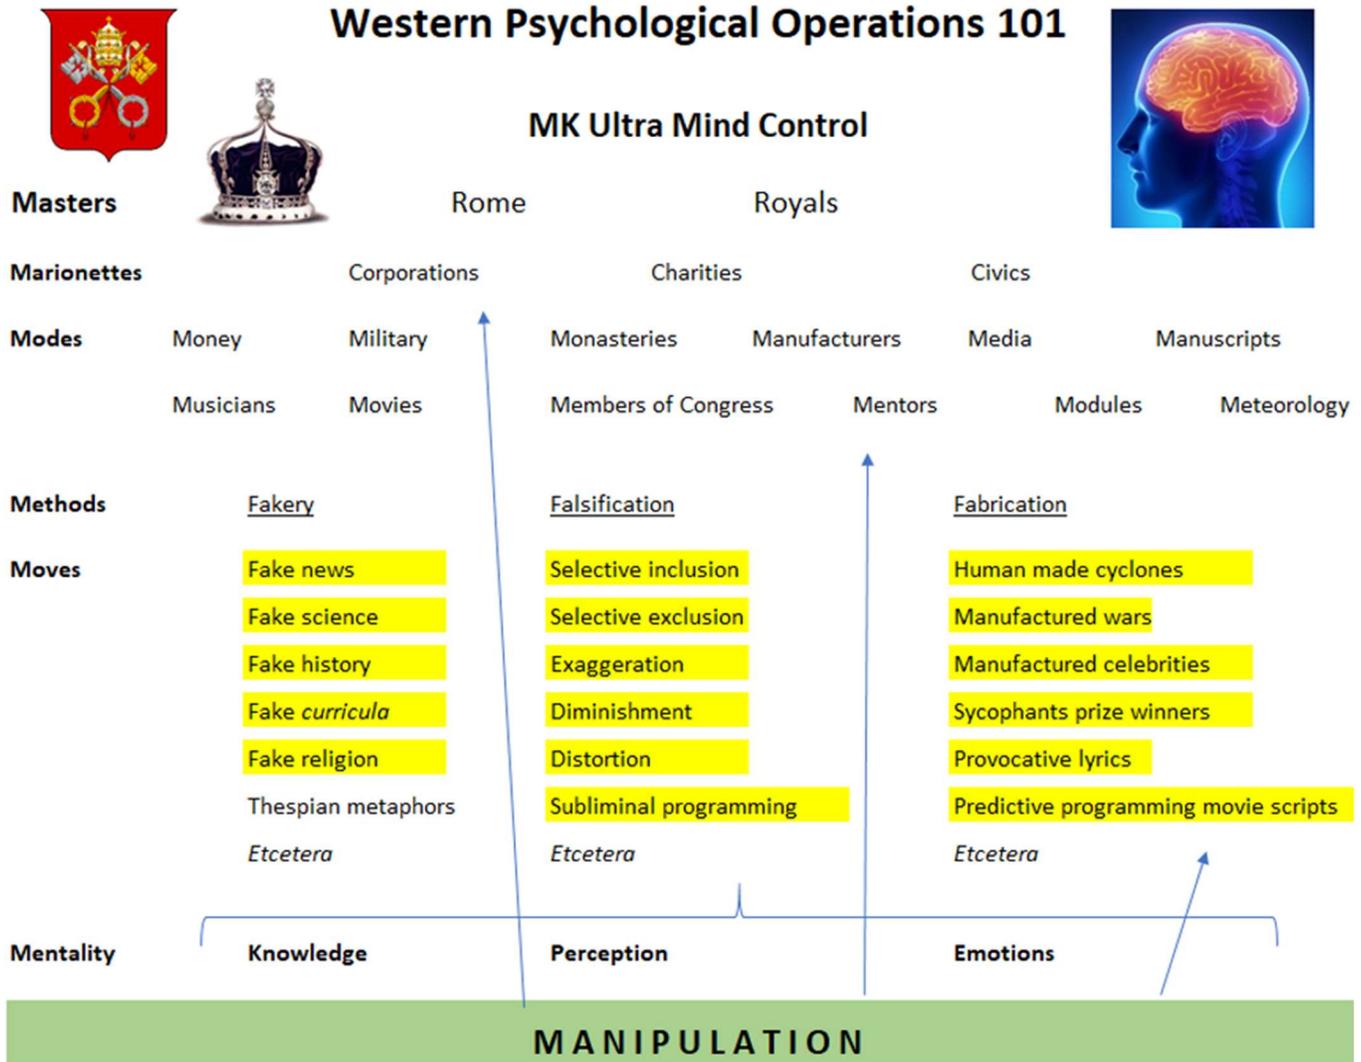

Your beautiful mind can do the math. Prices shown below were published in 2018.

How Much Does Tamiflu Cost? plushcare.com/blog/how-much-does-tamiflu-cost/

If you are feeling sick and need to get a prescription for medication, the cost for Tamiflu varies widely, depending on where you purchase the medication and whether or not you have insurance. Tamiflu is the brand-name of oseltamivir. The cost for the Tamiflu brand may be around $175. However, there is a generic version of this antiviral drug that may cost about $135 for a 10-dose prescription.

I hope my pension fund invests in Hoffmann-La Roche Inc. Then again, I hope they don't. Ethics.

Moves

Items highlighted yellow in the figure above have been discussed in this book in prior chapters.

Metaphors

As shown on the previous page, at least one example of each 'move' has been discussed. You may access these topics via this book's index. The notion of 'diminishment' and 'predictive programming' were briefly explored. I therefore extend this topic in the next few paragraphs.

Predictive programming is a major Deep State MK Ultra weapon. Future events are often played out in fictional cultural media such as video games, television series and Hollywood movies. These videos supposedly show that various computer games foreshadowed the 9/11 false flag.

Predictive programming supposedly grooms the human mind to being accustomed to seeing events that are planned as future false flag events. When the event occurs, people do not question the event's authenticity as they have been groomed to accept such as acts as realistic.

Diminishment as a form of MK Ultra mind-control is a simple technique that dilutes the gravity and magnitude of a truth. For example, historians may argue that Adolph Hitler was a controlled puppet. He was therefore not culpable for any atrocities committed by his Nazi Third Reich which was controlled by the Rothschilds, Vatican, House of Orange and House of Windsor crime family.

Thespian Metaphors is a personal favorite topic of this author. He may have coined this term and concept in the MK Ultra analysis context. I have declared my benign conflict-of-interest!

This author theorizes that virtually all super-celebrities are manufactured commodities. I call them thespians because they are merely (note the diminishing language) that – bad actors. I label them metaphors, because I theorize that these super-celebrities are code word for one or two core messages and agendas. This New York Post article seems to fit within this school of thought.

Elon Musk is a total fraud

By Maureen Callahan

July 21, 2018 | 8:32am

So far, Tesla's Elon Musk has only been successful at tricking people into thinking he's a success.

REUTERS

One disastrous tweet has finally revealed Elon Musk for what he is: a fraud.

According to this theory, few published details about super-celebrities are correct. They are fabricated by those who control the narratives. Super-celebrities are those who are among the most cited and celebrated stars in their field. Jeff Bezos is an example of apex corporate success in general and retail trading (and online retailing) in particular. Nicole Kidman is an apex actress.

This table summarizes the key features of thespian public relations front agents whose profile covers for higher ranking elites who fully control these celebrities' private and professional lives.

Public perception	Fiction versus fact
Hans Solo Genius	Corporate giants such as Facebook and Tesla were supposedly startup enterprises created by one or few geniuses. Many of these CEO-Chairman geniuses are fairytale fairies. Facebook was mostly likely created by an intelligence agency. It reports to the House of Windsor crime family.
Bravado Biography	Historical biographies planted on popular Deep State sites like Wikipedia are fake. Wikipedia's faceless arch editors do not permit truthful corrections. Deep State Mockingbird media copy-paste the same fake narratives. Julian Assange is a classic. He supposedly attended 37 schools. Therefore no one can confirm much about his childhood. Convenient.
Mass success, Deification	The masses are brainwashed to hero worship these stars by mainstream press. Trash magazines such as Hello! publish trivial stories about celebrities changing their hairstyle or wearing a designer gown. Yawn.
Authority	These phony actors become authorities who are widely cited on narrow topics. Warren Buffet is supposedly the #1 global expert on personal finance decisions. According to mainstream fake news media.
Prizes	These sycophants are the ones who dominate the most prestigious honors such as the Academy Awards and the so-called Nobel Peace Prize.

Most Western countries ban generic advertisements of prescription drugs. In countries like Australia, pharmaceutical manufacturers must apply for a special permit to publicly advertise their drugs. These licenses are exceptionally difficult to obtain. America allows pharmaceutical corporations to advertise their dubious drugs to mass audiences. Such campaigns may be a form of MK Ultra, based partially on repetition. The other part is based on the vague symptoms propagated for dozens of different drug classes, such as nausea, fatigue and joint pain.

This parody meme bears broad similarities with real pharmaceutical advertisements. Many conditions labelled 'disorders' earn the medical and pharmaceutical industry billions in profits.

Around half of all Americans take one or more prescription drugs daily. Around 80% of Americans live paycheck to paycheck. Meanwhile, pharmaceutical profits of the biggest manufacturers are multibillions of dollars each financial year. Enough? Is less big pharma more than enough?

MK Ultra misdiagnosis and overprescribing are worthy of a separate section in this book. This is a top 10 policy priority for those who claim to be enemies of the dirtball Deep State.

Microwaves

Microwave technology is a fact. We have been heating our leftover pizza this way since the early 1980s. Advanced Deep State researchers like Deborah Tavares claim that psychotronic weapons, that use microwave technologies, can and do target the minds of individuals. These waves may torment a person and/or cause brain damage. Both interventions are classic forms of MK Ultra – harming people and populations to enhance insatiable power-and-control appetites of royals, Rothschilds and demonic religious leaders who don red skin shoes. Deep State Playbook 101.

This topic is difficult for laypersons to investigate. Access to advanced laboratory equipment and protected sites, such as Rothschild owned PG&E power sites are required. Those with an inquiring mind may consult Deborah's comprehensive Stop the Crime website as a first point-of-call.

“Army intelligence officers are using classified anti-personnel weapons to target activists and people who fit a common profile. Edited by Marshall Thomas The case being made is based on Four Facts, these four facts are the bare bones case to avoid confusion, disinformation, and circular arguments that lead nowhere. MKULTRA took place at over 80 institutions and the current illegal program that I call MONARCH (the real name is unknown) is equally complex. The four facts are all that is necessary to convince a reasonable person that this atrocity is really taking place and demands immediate action. ONE: Public microwave weapons exist. TWO: A prior pattern of criminal behavior. THREE: Credible witnesses who fit a common profile. FOUR: Persons of interest in military intelligence in charge of developing nonlethal microwave weapons who must be investigated. ONE: Microwave weapons like the Active Denial System (ADS) and milliwave radars are public electromagnetic weapons. The Russians used microwave weapons to attack the American embassy in Moscow in the 1950’s. In response the US began a secret crash program to develop microwave weapons. TWO: There is a criminal history dating back to 1943, a prior pattern of criminal behavior all through the Cold War. Half a million US citizens used as human guinea pigs in nuclear, biological, and chemical (NBC) weapons development programs. FBI Cointelpro government hit lists of political activists, and CIA MKULTRA using torture to break the human mind to control it. All of these illegal government programs escaped detection for decades and no perpetrators were ever punished. THREE: Credible witnesses, people who have testified that they are targets of classified nonlethal microwave weapons assaults and organized stalking. The author has interviewed more than 200 targets in person and documented their stories. Most targeted individuals (TI’s) are political activists or whistleblowers that are around forty years old, have an above average IQ, and share other commonalities. The majority of the targets fit a common profile similar to the victims of previous programs. FOUR: Persons of interest, military intelligence officers who have worked since 1980 to develop nonlethal microwave weapons for the Army. They publicly advocated using them on civilians to “neuter people”, expressed admiration for MKULTRA crimes, and given the classified weapons to local law enforcement and others. In addition they promote borderline beliefs and superstitions as part of a smoke screen cover-up. These are the basic facts reduced to their bare minimum. There is much more evidence available in the films, blogs, and supporting government documents, military science papers, nonlethal weapons scientists papers and patents, authoritative newspaper and magazine articles, books, films, and the testimony of experts and witnesses. The Four Facts are all that is necessary to prove a preponderance of evidence, and convince a reasonable person that these crimes are actually taking place and must be stopped. If it adds up to FOUR, people open the door!”

Climate geo-engineering aircraft which spray aerosol poisons over most Western countries, at least once weekly, pursue other objectives beyond creating bushfires and destorying crop producing farmland. These criminal aircraft may also be spraying so-called 'smart dust' particles that enter most humans' lungs. According to this well-researched theory, humans become susceptible to mind-control radio frequencies beamed from the millions of power lines and satellite dishes on this planet. Metals found in synthetic food, pharma and toiletries, such as aluminum, mercury and titanium, likewise morph humans into walking satellite receptors. They also reduce life expectancy – the depopulation agenda.

MK Ultra has German roots. These projects may or may not have ended at the CIA in 1973.

Whether it ended at the CIA 'is academic' and irrelevant as this all-revealing famed idiom goes.

Devious, scheming MK Ultra-like projects are massively pervasive throughout the most powerful social, cultural, political and economic agencies that slave-drives our comatose Western society.

The incessant consolidation of Earthly wealth and power among a handful of inbred European Royal crime families, the Vatican and their Billionaire Boy-slaves Club is evidence of this fact.

The reset of the soon to collapse usurious fiat money system requires a smoke-and-mirrors Mother of all MK Ultra distractions to soften the blow of our Earth's new gulag. The adjective 'crypto' means 'secretive' and 'hidden'. Dark powers shamelessly advertise that their new MK Ultra money system is as deeply coded as their latest Superbowl half time Babylonian peep show.

Cryptocurrency slavery and the transformation of humans into city dwelling cyborg serfs are imminent challenges faced by fleshy humans who prefer freedom over a make-believe matrix of madness. What will you do when your government dictates that you must access the new global financial system with an Iris scan? Now is the time to decide. When this question is beam-waved to your dreams, it will be mass marketed with every troll-like trick outlined in this MK Ultra 101 Playbook. —————> Free  Hiss off, Black See.

This summary table may aid you to objectively question all media and data sources.

Data principle	Explanation and example
1. Bias	Sources that are known or suspected to be influenced by a conflict-of-interest should be ignored or analyzed with extreme caution. Example: A syndicated news columnist recommends that science teachers purchase a certain Sage book for each student about Global Warming Studies and set this book as part of the core science curricula. This writer does not inform their audience that they are a part owner of company that publishes this book. Critical-thinkers should question if this recommendation undermines the validity of the scientific opinions that are published in this book.
2. Errors (accidental)	Data sources that are influenced by factual errors in content and opinions should be ignored or analyzed with extreme caution. Example: The errata section of a school textbook states that “this book contains a small number research errors that are not the publisher’s fault.” Critical-thinkers should consult a range of other sources to verify the accuracy of that book, as the errata section does not identify each error specifically.
3. Falsities (deliberate)	Data sources that are influenced by incorrect/fake content and opinions should be ignored or analyzed with extreme caution. A public speaker issues a notice declaring that some material they presented at global conferences was fake and motivated by a desire to become famous. Critical-thinkers should consider the net benefits that may be gained from ignoring all advice offered by that speaker. If a person admits to deceitful practices it may be difficult to know what statements they made are true or false.
4. Misleading	Data sources that are influenced by misleading content should be ignored or analyzed with extreme caution. Example: A pharmaceutical consultant informs congress that most bio-scientists “strongly support the validity of enforcing mandatory flu vaccines in public schools”. He does not inform this panel that this majority which he refers to is 50.03% of bio-scientists who engaged with the survey. In this sensitive context, the adjective “strongly supports” is a compelling statement. Failure to mention that 49.97% of those surveyed stated that they “strongly reject” this mandatory policy means that this consultant is using semantics to mislead their audience.

Suggested question: Has this author provided sufficient evidence that MK ultra exists/existed?

Non-dichotomy analysis model

Opinion 1

Absolutely. This book provides a trail of evidence and data references. All claims are consistent with what I have seen in my life time.

Opinion 3

I think that most of the claims are true. However, I do not see any credible evidence that MK Ultra existed after 1973.

Opinion 2

I do not believe anything in this book. None of these claims are taught by respected orthodox universities.

Side 1

Side 1 is a polemic viewpoint

Middle Ground

Side 2

Side 2 is a polemic viewpoint

Alternative argument 1:

These claims would take decades to prove. I don't have the time or will to confirm these opinions. I therefore have no opinion.

Opinion 4

Alternative argument 2:

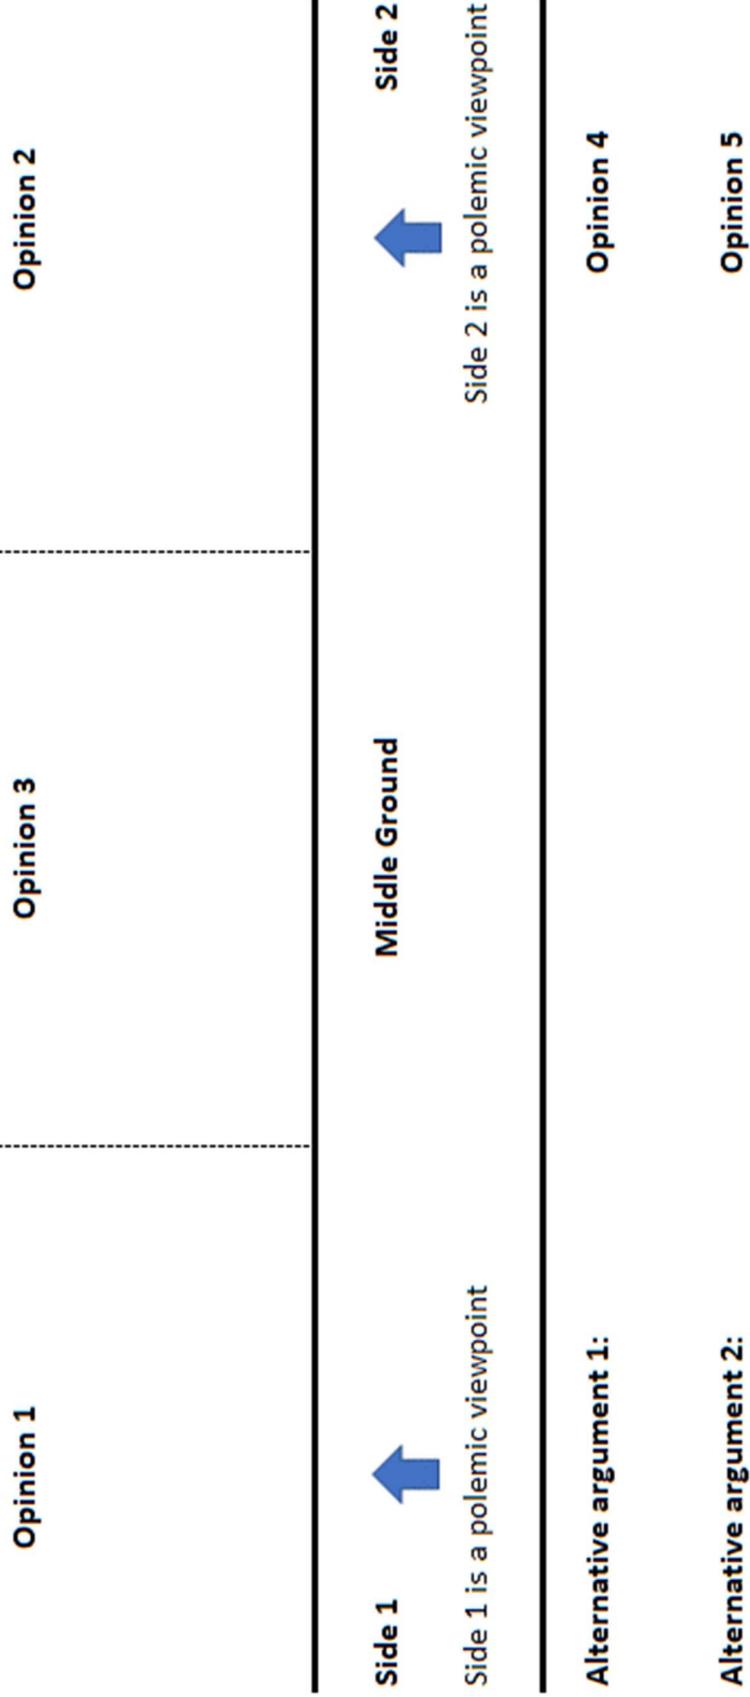

This book is not neutral. It takes sides. I therefore have no opinion about its content.

Panel Finds CIA Broke Law, Defends Record

By George Lambert Jr.
Washington Post Staff Writer

The Central Intelligence Agency engaged in a flagrant illegal conduct over its illegal library from burglary to burglary to violate LSD on an unending pattern, the Senate Intelligence Committee report, issued yesterday.

The committee, however, defended the CIA's overall record and said that no fundamental changes were needed in the way the agency's basic legislative charter.

In addition to violation of federal criminal laws, the committee said other activities—such as its so-called project called Operation Chaos that involved spying on American citizens groups, to respond to White House probes—were clearly improper.

"Some of these activities were not only not ordered by Presidents, either directly or indirectly," the eight-member committee headed by Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey and the committee chief, Senator Frank Church, said.

In a 200-page report, made public by the White House, the committee endorsed voter oversight of the CIA by both Congress and the intelligence branch, but rejected those proposals.

The report also said that the CIA's overall record was "commendable" and that the agency should be given "maximum latitude" to carry out its mission.

At the same time, the report said that the agency has a long way to go to prevent a recurrence of the abuses that were found.

The CIA Inspector General's report, which investigated many of the agency's activities in 1971, had previously been cut back sharply and is generally credited to have revealed reviews of the CIA's overall operations, the committee charged.

The report called for every activity the agency itself has done "whenever it is possible" to be reviewed, "including" its "internal" operations, "including" its "internal" operations, "including" its "internal" operations.

In many cases, the committee said, a variety of laws, procedures and standards in the area of CIA activities.

The goal of the CIA is to provide the president with the information that he needs to make the best possible decisions on the basis of the intelligence that is available to him.

activities to such that it is often difficult to determine who the intelligence was obtained in the first place, who authorized the special covert, and what the results were.

The report also stated that for more than 20 years, the "Department of Justice never wanted to build an alleged criminal network for CIA employees or agents and agreed to let the CIA decide whether a crime had been committed and whether anyone was guilty."

Harsh criticism of the arrangement, the committee called it "an affront to the Department of Justice and its statutory responsibilities."

"This state of affairs," the committee said, "continued until January of 1973—the month following disclosure in The New York Times of some of the illegal and improper activities that had been uncovered by the CIA Inspector General's two-year report. The same vice happened almost daily that the CIA had permitted no prosecution was being and would have been able to maintain their position had for the job."

The committee made 30 recommendations for changes, ranging from more stringent internal controls and guide lines within the CIA on the one hand to steps on the other hand of the CIA's language, which is an official document.

The CIA report "made it a criminal of laws for espionage or further violations of the CIA's ability to operate in any unauthorized, proper classified information pertaining to foreign intelligence or the activities thereof authorized during the course of their assignments."

The committee also expressed the President Ford issue an executive order that would give the CIA more explicit authority the operations in this country for allowing it to collect information on "persons suspected of espionage or other illegal activities in connection with foreign intelligence, provided that proper coordination with the FBI is maintained."

Under the National Security Act of 1949, the CIA is authorized to

CIA Infiltrated 17 Area Groups, Gave Out LSD

Suicide Revealed District the Focus

By Thomas O'Toole
Washington Post Staff Writer

A critical analysis of the Department of the Army's activities to give LSD as part of a Central Intelligence Agency led, then turned it over to its own long list of area groups, according to the investigative committee report, released yesterday.

The report was given the drug while attending a meeting with CIA personnel working on a top project that involved the administration of mind-altering drugs to unsuspecting Americans and the testing of new listening devices by surreptitiously installing them in homes where they were being searched.

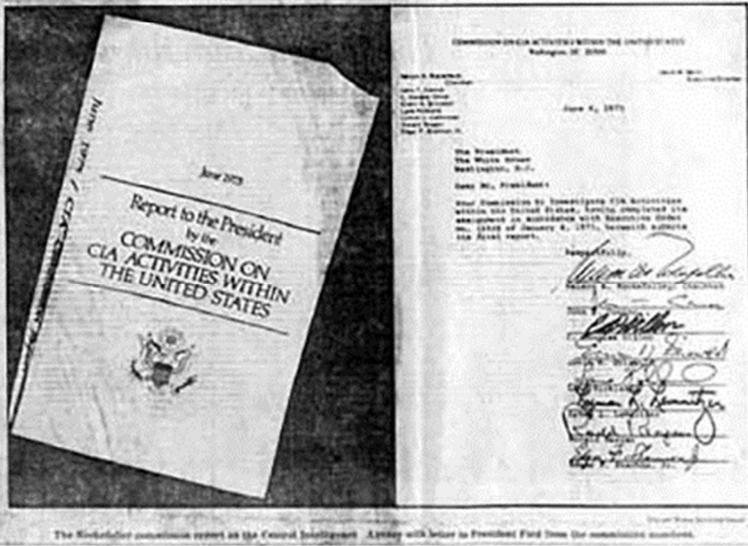

"This infiltration was not made aware to had been given LSD since about 20 years ago after it had been administered," the committee said. "The 'discovery' series of efforts and was sent to New York with a CIA report the participants used, several days later, he learned from a source that the CIA was aware of the CIA's activities in the area of LSD, which was given to the CIA work in District of Columbia and nearby at least 17 Washington area active groups—ranging from the Black Panthers to the Washington Ethical Society—during 1967 and 1968, according to the Senate Intelligence Committee report released yesterday.

Washington broke the news of nationwide CIA surveillance of antiwar and black national groups during those years, when protest demonstrations and disruptions were growing in size and intensity, the committee reported.

The document spying started after its contacts from President Johnson for information on possible "backdoor links to recently dissolved groups and leaders of the CIA's own war 1968, national dialogue might have the nation's interest of security."

The Senate Intelligence Committee charged that the surveillance of dissidents reported involved the CIA's high-level officials to conduct intelligence activities outside

The Operational Potential of Subliminal Perception

APPROVED FOR RELEASE 1994
CIA HISTORICAL REVIEW PROGRAM
18 SEPT 95

SECRET

Richard Gafford

Perception is demonstrated to have occurred below the threshold of conscious sensory experience when a person responds to a stimulus too weak in intensity or too short in duration for him to be aware of it. Individual behavior without awareness of the stimulus, of which subliminal perception is a subtype, has been a subject of study in psychological laboratories for at least 70 years, and a great deal of technical data has been collected on the subject. Recently it has been associated with some theories of depth analysis and popularized for possible commercial exploitation by the advertising world.

In the most sensational of these popularized experiments, an increase in popcorn sales in a New Jersey movie theater is said to have been stimulated by subliminal interruptions of the feature film with an advertisement urging the patrons to buy popcorn. The exposure time used, a small fraction of a second, was too brief for conscious discrimination by an observer absorbed in the film story but presumably long enough to have some stimulating effect. The advertising men who are currently interested in this phenomenon as a sales technique argue that the short-duration stimulus appeals to a positive motive, for example an appetite for popcorn, without arousing the rational, conscious sales-resistance of the individual, based perhaps on the desire to save money or lose weight.

The argument becomes more complicated with respect to a product which there is no specific preexisting positive motive to acquire. The appeal is now said to be directed to a "deep" underlying motive presumed to be always operating, never satiated, say the sex drive. The masked stimulus arouses some aspect of this ubiquitous sex drive, a drive which can hardly be directly satiated in polite society and one of which the conscious recognition is more or less anxiety-producing. The vague discomfort the individual feels as a result of subconscious stimulation must be allayed by some associated gratification, and this gratification - the advertiser hopes - is the socially acceptable acquisition of the product which he is trying to promote.

It is evident that there are several mighty leaps in logic in the advertising man's argument, and a great many places where his scheme can go astray. He has taken several psychological phenomena which have been demonstrated to a limited degree in controlled laboratory experiments and strung them together into an appealing argument for a "technique." Because part of what he is promoting is supported by laboratory data, however, it has enough status to warrant serious attention.

The operational potential of other techniques for stimulating a person to take a specific controlled action without his being aware of the stimulus, or the source of stimulation, has in the past caught the attention of imaginative intelligence officers. Interest in the operational potential of subliminal perception has precedent in serious consideration of the techniques of hypnosis, extrasensory perception, and various forms of conditioning. By each of these techniques, it has been demonstrated, certain individuals can at certain times and under certain circumstances be influenced to act abnormally without awareness of the influence or at least without antagonism.

After careful research on each of these methods, however, it has become apparent that although they occasionally produce dramatic results, their lack of reliability and their requirement for extremely precise controls to obtain the desired effect have limited their operational utility to a very few very specialized instances -situations where just the right persons can be put together at just the right moment under closely controlled circumstances. The primary danger observed in connection with this unreliability is that of a "flashback," of inadvertently producing just the opposite effect to that desired. Subliminal perception as a practical control or persuasion technique is prone to the same difficulties.

There are four principal categories of behavior without awareness.

The individual may be unaware of:

a) his behavior itself.

He may be whispering without realizing he is whispering, or he may be moving into a trap without knowing that the trap is there. A special case here is abnormal behavior in which the individual fails to realize what he is doing because his normal awareness and self-control have been interrupted by disturbing agents such as fear, anxiety, illness, drugs, or hypnotic suggestion.

b) the relation of his behavior to some stimulus.

The individual may be unaware of the fact that his interrogator is influencing him by saying "Right" after certain statements and by remaining noncommittal after others. The process called "operant conditioning" falls into this category.

c) the stimulus itself, because of its slight impact.

The individual may be unaware of a very faint sound or a quick flash of light, unaware in the sense that he lacks the usual visual sensations. Subliminal perception falls into this category.

d) the precise nature of the stimulus, as well as its relation to his behavior, because of inattention.

The individual may be aware of vague sensations, but he is not aware either of the source or of the significant content of the stimulation, although his behavior may change in accordance with changes in the stimulus. This category includes a great deal of perceptual activity affecting ordinary social behavior. A person is often unaware of the specific cues and clues to which he is reacting not because the stimulus is insufficient to reach the consciousness but because the effort to be fully aware of all the cues all the time would create too great a cognitive strain.

In persuading a person to do something he normally or rationally would resist doing an intelligence operative can make use of any one of these categories of psychological processes. Usually the purpose is to produce behavior of which the individual is unaware. The use of subliminal perception, on the other hand, is a device to keep him unaware of the source of his stimulation. The desire here is not to keep him unaware of what he is doing, but rather to keep him unaware of why he is doing it, by masking the external cue or message with subliminal presentation and so stimulating an unrecognized motive.

In order to develop the subliminal perception process for use as a reliable operational technique, it would be necessary a) to define the composition of a subliminal cue or message which will trigger an appropriate preexisting motive, b) to determine the limits of intensity between which this stimulus is effective but not consciously perceived, c) to determine what preexisting motive will produce the desired abnormal action and under what conditions it is operative, and d) to overcome the defenses aroused by consciousness of the action itself.

As to the composition of the subliminal cue, it cannot be supposed that just any message presented close below the threshold of recognition will be translated into appropriate action. The determination of the right kind of message in terms of content, number and type of words or symbols, grouping of symbols, and so forth has been the object of a great deal of psychological experiment. There is a good deal of lore and a few rather vague principles available, but generally they concern rather trivial areas of action from the viewpoint of the intelligence operative. Since the effectiveness of the procedure depends on not arousing the person's defense mechanisms, and since defense mechanisms are not only peculiar to each individual but hard to discover, it is difficult to specify even what is to be avoided in the composition of the subliminal cue in order not to arouse the defenses.

Thresholds of recognition are variable and difficult to determine. If the intensity of the stimulus is much below an individual's threshold it doesn't get through to even the most automatic areas of his sensorium. But recognition thresholds vary tremendously, not only among individuals, but also in the same individual from one time to another, in accordance with his physical situation, his physiological condition, and above all the degree to which he is psychologically attuned to the particular content of the message. A normal human being is an infinitely more complex receiving instrument than any electronic gadget, and adjusting a stimulus for such a variable receiver is difficult. In most of the laboratory studies on which the current theory of subliminal perception is based ¹ there has been a long pretrial period requiring the subject's full cooperation to zero him in on the subliminal signal. Such preparation is clearly not feasible for operational use. The message must therefore be transmitted on a much wider intensity band and may frequently not get through or may on the other hand penetrate to the subject's consciousness and arouse his defenses.

The message once received is presumed to trigger some sensitive subconscious motivation to action. There are numerous psychological theories about such inner functions, but little definitely known about them. If a somewhat homogeneous sample of people is tested a number of times, most of them will be sensitive most of the time to the subliminal cue; but some individuals, for a great variety of reasons we can little more than guess at, will be insensitive. In this minority of instances the individual may do nothing, may do something trivial and irrelevant, or may do the exact opposite of what was intended.

If the subliminal cue is to work by tripping off an existing motive to action, one must know what motives are positive and operant at the moment. The obvious basic drives (e.g. hunger, sex) are sometimes satiated and sometimes subordinated. With a great deal of knowledge about the individual, some predictability can be attained, but it is still a matter of probabilities. The percentage of instances will be high where the opposite motive to that desired will be tripped off.

There appears thus to be such a myriad of factors that even the most simplified empirical tests carried out with the best possible cooperation of the subjects are rarely marked by really significant reliability. Furthermore, with such a large number of variables and relatively low reliability, it is difficult to determine whether the controlled variable or uncontrolled artifacts are producing whatever results one does observe.

Finally, the subliminal device to avoid alerting an individual's defenses by masking the cue and the basic motive does not cover the effect of awareness of the resultant abnormal action itself, with its implications and consequences. Assuming that one could persuade to such action by presenting a cue subliminally, there is no way of effecting the action without awareness and without tripping off defenses and rational resistance. It must be concluded that there are so many elusive variables and so many sources of irregularity in the device of directing subliminal messages to a target individual that its operational feasibility is exceedingly limited.

80 INSTITUTIONS USED IN C.I.A. MIND STUDIES

Admiral Turner Tells Senators of Behavior Control Research— Bars Drug Testing Now

By NICHOLAS M. HORROCK

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3—Adm. Stansfield Turner, the Director of Central Intelligence, testified today that the C.I.A. had secretly supported human behavior control research at 80 institutions, including 44 colleges or universities as well as hospitals, prisons and pharmaceutical companies.

He told a joint hearing of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence and the Senate Health subcommittee that recently discovered financial records indicate that during the most intense period of the project, code-named MK-Ultra, the agency had supported 185 nongovernment researchers in 149 separate research projects. He said that the main action years of MK-Ultra were from 1953 through 1963. The projects, he said, had included tests of LSD and of a "K," or "knockout drop."

"It is totally abhorrent to me to think of using humans as guinea pigs," Admiral Turner said, adding: "I assure you that the C.I.A. is in no way engaged in either witting or unwitting testing of drugs today."

He said he had turned over the names of the institutions and the researchers to Senate investigators and said that the agency would notify the institutions that were used.

Subjects Being Sought

Admiral Turner said that the 8,000 pages of newly discovered documents do not contain the names of the subjects of the tests but do contain "leads" that might enable them to be found.

He said that he was working with the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, Joseph A. Califano Jr., and Attorney General Griffin B. Bell to see if the C.I.A. could find the subjects used in medical and drug experiments and discover if any persons had suffered damage as a result of the experiments.

Staffs of the Senate intelligence committee and the health subcommittee are continuing an investigation, and the health subcommittee plans additional public hearings in September.

The following new details of the C.I.A.'s behavior control experiments emerged at today's hearing:

Admiral Turner acknowledged under questioning that the C.I.A. had apparently planned to test drugs on terminal cancer patients at the same institution where it secretly contributed $375,000 toward the construction of a hospital building. The New York Times has independently confirmed the institution is Georgetown University Medical School here.

Admiral Turner said that "some unwitting testing took place on criminal sexual psychopaths confined at a state hospital." He did not identify the institution.

Though the main active years for MK-Ultra were 1953 to 1963, the C.I.A. is conducting an internal inquiry to determine what its role may have been in a project coordinated with the Department of the Army, code-named Oifen -Chickwit, that was active until 1973.

The involvement with Georgetown University Hospital, which served many of Washington's most powerful figures and treated the son of the Senate Health subcommittee chairman, Edward M. Kennedy, for cancer, was the most illustrative of how the C.I.A. operated. The agency was seeking an institution where its own personnel could test a wide range of drugs including a "knockout pill."

In 1955, the agency authorized a $375,000 contribution toward the construction of the Gorman Building at the university through a covert medical fund, the Geschikter Foundation for Medical Research. Though Admiral Turner never mentioned Georgetown by name, he said there was no indication that the unnamed university officials knew about the agency's involvement.

The C.I.A., according to documents turned over to the Senate, was worried about the legality of the secret funding because Georgetown took the Geschikter grant and used it with other money to obtain matching funds under provisions of the Hill-Burton Act, which supported hospital construction. Under certain circumstances it is illegal to use one Federal grant to obtain another. The C.I.A. obtained an opinion from its counsel in 1955 that its process was legal.

"The proposed facility," wrote one unidentified official, "offers a unique opportunity for the secure handling of such clinical testing." Admiral Turner said that the C.I.A. had obtained no evidence that testing actually took place.

However, Senator Richard S. Schweiker, Republican of Pennsylvania, said that his reading of documents supplied by the agency made it an inescapable conclusion that tests took place.

'Right to Know' Stressed

At the two-hour hearing today, Senator Kennedy, a Massachusetts Democrat, pressed Admiral Turner to let the universities, researchers and possible subjects of the tests know of the C.I.A.'s involvement. "The individuals have a right to know who they are and why they were used," he said.

Senator Kennedy also urged Admiral Turner to find and interview Dr. Sidney J. Gottlieb, a 24-year employe of the C.I.A.'s technical service division, which directed the projects.

"Every single document the staff reviews has Mr. Gottlieb's name on it," the Senator said, adding, "One thing is for sure: Gottlieb knows." Dr. Gottlieb, who retired in 1973, was interviewed at length by Senate investigators in 1975 but told them he could not recall much about the project.
